IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Christine Hayden in "Dancing Shadow" : A Present for Lord Halifax : Film and its Keeping Power The New Secretary for Scotland

A Light of Labour

Mr. Tom Johnston, whom the reshuffle of offices in the British Cabinet has made Secretary for Scotland, is one of the ablest administrators brought out by the Labour Party.

In the last Labour Government in 1929 he was Lord Privy Seal, and was one of the Ministers who parted company then with Ramsay Macdonald after many years of personal, as well as political, friendship.

Mr. Johnston was born in Kirkintilloch fifty-nine years ago, and went from the elementary school there to Glasgow University. In Glasgow he was one of the founders and President of the University Socialist Society. He was founder, too, and for many years editor, of the Glasgow Socialist weekly, Forward, in which George Bernard Shaw's references to Ireland in this war have been making such stir lately.

From 1914 to 1918 Mr. Johnston conducted an extremely vigorous campaign against the war, but was broadminded enough to continue to print weekly columns written by regular contributors who were violently opposed to his editorial policy. Among his contributors for several years were Ramsay Macdonald and James Connolly. Under his régime, Forward had one of its issues confiscated for carrying a verbatim report of a very stormy meeting of Clyde workers addressed by Mr. Lloyd George as Minister of Munitions.

Mr. Johnston is the author of the standard "History of the Working Classes in Scotland," and another work of his, "Our Noble Families," has sold over 100,000 copies.

Coincidences

I see that Micheal MacLiammoir's new play, "Dancing Shadow," which opens next week at the Gaiety, will have in one of the principal parts Christine Hayden, from the Abbey Theatre.

"Chris" made her début at the Abbey in 1917—oddly enough, the very year in which the first act of "Dancing Shadow," her début with Edwards-MacLiammoir, takes place. To push coincidence to its logical extreme, I suppose that in this second 1917 she should play the part of someone making her début on the stage! She misses this ultimate of coincidence, but not by much, for in MacLiammoir's play she is Mary Conlan, who in 1917 has just moved from Cork to Dublin and started theatrical "digs."

In recent years Miss Hayden has appeared on the stage less frequently, preferring to devote her time to her home—she is the wife of Eric Gorman, Secretary of the National Theatre Society—and to her ruling hobby, golf.

But the part of Mary Conlan, one of those delightful mothers with an amusingly distracted manner hiding a surprising but equally amusing practicality, won her enthusiasm at once.

This is the first time she has played with any of the company except Meriel Moore. Meriel and she met in the London production of "Drama at Inch" at the Ambassadors some years ago, where both were on leave from Dublin.

Another coincidence? Perhaps, but I will not pursue this one!

—and a Mishap

Now that I am on the subject, I hear that the "great snow of '41"—now, happily, a memory—very nearly had serious artistic effects.

Alighting from an automobile, Micheal MacLiammoir met with a slight accident, which resulted in several cuts and bruises serious enough to prohibit his working for over a week. During that week the Dublin Gate Theatre were in a fine state of suspense. Besides being the author, Micheal is also acting one of the principal parts and designing the décor, so that without him the show could not go on.

However, he returned to rehearsals with no visible bad effects. I hear, by the way, that "Dancing Shadow" is quite different from "Where Stars Walk," in that Micheal has left the influence of Irish mythology for a story of everyday modern Dublin and the shadow of an Andalusian dancer.

Concerning Film

It is many a long month since I made any use of my camera, which used to be an inseparable companion; but, finding it in an inconspicuous corner of my bedroom, I discovered that it contained a film on which approximately eighteen out of a possible thirty-six exposures had been made.

I was minded to throw the film away, on the ground that after lying in the camera for so long it would probably have gone sour or something, but on second thoughts I developed it, and found the results quite satisfactory

Film, even when exposed, seems to have remarkable keeping powers. My friend, Barry Mason, who ought to know what he is talking about, tells me, however, that its keeping powers depend to a very large extent on the locality, and in this respect we are lucky, because Dublin appears to be one of the better places.

You can generally reckon that the average film—I am uncertain whether he refers to miniature film, packed in a tin, or to any kind—will remain in good condition for eighteen months to two years after the date marked on it. He is assuming, of course, that you do not store it in the bathroom.

Dublin, in fact, is exceptionally good for this purpose. Portsmouth, on the other hand, is the worst place for the storage of film in these islands. A film is lucky if it remains good for six months after the date marked.

Why there should be such a difference between the atmosphere of two seaports I cannot tell.

Lord Halifax's Bedside Book

Among the luggage Lord Halifax took with him to Washington was a tattered leather-bound book presented to him recently by an Irish friend of mine living in London.

A few months ago my friend was burrowing among a heap of somewhat unpromising-looking rubbish in a crowded second-hand dealer's in Brighton. At the bottom of an immense pile, marked "6d. each," he spied the unmistakable tooled binding of a Pickering and at once began scrambling for it. It turned out to be an exquisitely printed edition (1859) of Thomas à Kempis—a superb Pickering of the best period, with ravishing ornamented red capitals.

It was not, however, till months later that my friend noticed on the fly-leaf the inscription in faded yellowing ink: "George Graham, from his sincere friend, Charles Lindley Wood, on his leaving Eton, Christmas, 1864."

This set him thinking; for Charles Lindley Wood was, of course, the name of Lord Halifax's father, the famous leader of the Anglo-Catholic movement in the Church of England, who died a few years ago at the age of 94 and to whom the present Lord Halifax was devoted.

So he wrote to Lord Halifax, asking him if he would like to have the book as a gift. Lord Halifax replied by special messenger within a few hours, and on receiving the book wrote again to my friend, saying that "for special sentimental reasons" he would treasure the book, and that it would accompany him as a bedside book on his travels wherever he went.

LIGHT EMERGENCY AMBULANCE

CINEMA GIFT TO RED CROSS

Receiving a light emergency ambulance, the gift of the Theatre and Cinema Association of Ireland, at the headquarters of the Red Cross Society in Merrion square, Dublin, yesterday, the Hon. Mr. Justice Conor Maguire, chairman of the Council of the Society, said that from the lessons learned in England it was found that this type of ambulance was likely to be more valuable than the heavier ones during an emergency. He thanked the Association for their gift and said that many more ambulances were required to implement the Society's plans.

Mr John Fagan, President of the Association, who made the presentation, expressed the hope that it never would have to be used for the purpose for which it was intended.

Those present at the ceremony included:—Mr. W. E. Wylie, K.C.; Colonel McKinney, Mr. G. Ellis, secretary of Irish Cinemas, Ltd.; Mr. W. McNally, Mr. L. E. Ging, Mr. A. Elliman, Mr Maurice Elliman, Mr. P. J. Gallagher (representing Messrs. Kennedy Crowley, secretaries), and Mr. P. J. Whelan.

HOW TO DEAL WITH INCENDIARY BOMBS

Following a request from members of the St. Barnabas Public Utility Society for instruction on the subject, a large gathering of residents of the East Wall district in the St. Barnabas Hall was treated last night to an informative lecture on incendiary bombs and how to deal with them.

To help the members of the Society in organising against the possibility of damage by incendiary bombs, Captain McDonagh, No. 3 Area Warden, and Mr. William G. Nolan, Director of Training, No. 8 Area, explained the nature of the measures to be taken against fire bombs and afterwards gave a practical demonstration of how they are dealt with.

The audience included representatives of several large commercial undertakings in the area.

IRISH RED CROSS SOCIETY

DUBLIN CITY BRANCH

The first meeting of the newly-elected Committee of the Dublin City Branch, Irish Red Cross Society, was held at 7-8 Lower Abbey street. The Lord Mayor presided, and the attendance included the Very Rev. M. S. Canon McMahon, P.P., Vice-Chairman; Mr. D. Bridgman, Hon. Secretary; Mr. D. M. O'Kelly, Hon. Treasurer; Dr. T. A Bouchier-Hayes, Mr. R. Henderson, Mrs. M. Hanlon, Dr. M. S. Walsh, Mr. J. P. O'Brien, Alderman P. S. Doyle, T.D.; Mr. M. O'Sullivan, T.C., and Mr. Cathal Loughney, Secretary.

Mrs. M Hanlon and Mrs. F. Aiken were chosen to fill vacancies among the branch representatives on the Dublin County Committee.

The Committee agreed to hold its meetings on the fourth Thursday of every month.

GREYSTONES PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The annual meeting of the Greystones congregation was held in the Church Hall—the Rev. R. K. Lyle in the chair—and was largely attended. A feature of the evening was the number of new members present. Reports were presented on the church's work, among them that for the kirk session by the clerk, Mr. W. H. Moore; the Women's Association for Foreign Missions, by Mrs. Young; the Sunday School, by Mrs. Lyle; the Literary Society, by Miss Melville; the Church Committee, with financial statement, by the Treasurer, Mr. J. E. Scott. Though faced with a considerable deficit, the congregation maintained its givings to missions, and made a special effort by means of a gift evening to clear off the accumulated debt. The effort had been entirely successful. Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Morrow contributed to the enjoyment of the evening by their fine rending of sacred songs.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL

The preacher at the Morning Service to-morrow in Christ Church Cathedral will be the Bishop of Ossory. The Service, both morning and evening, will be Stainer in E flat. After Evensong the Dean will give a short description of some of the objects of interest in the Cathedral to those who may be able to wait.

DUBLIN THEATRES NEXT WEEK

GAIETY—Hilton Edwards and Micheal Mac Liammoir (Dublin Gate Productions) open their season with the first production of "Dancing Shadow," a new play by Micheal Mac Liammoir.

ABBEY—"The Summit," George Shiels's sequel to his record breaking "Rugged Path," is proving so popular that it is being retained for another week.

THE GATE—On Tuesday "The Seagull," Tchehov's play, will be continued for a second week.

ROYAL—"Melody Rhythm" is the stage show "spotlighting" the Hayes's, supported by the Everett Brothers, Harvey and Forbes. The film, starting to-morrow night, is Bing Crosby's "Rhythm on the River."

OLYMPIA—"Trouble in Harlem," a completely new minstrel show, presented by the Cusex Productions.

TRINITY COLLEGE NOTES

SPEAKING OF LIT

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

London in the Blitzkrieg

"Business As Usual"

Bomber's Moon. By Negley Farson. With drawings by Tom Purvis. London: Gollancz. 8/6 net.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL." That is the whole theme of "Bomber's Moon." The book is a record in line and word of how London is carrying on in spite of the terrific air bombardment. Negley Farson and Tom Purvis take us with them all over London and show us "the sights"—sights so different in war-time and peace-time! Life in the underground shelters, in the tube stations, in the crypt of St. Martin's in-the-Field, Billingsgate—all are dealt with in turn and in Mr. Farson's brilliant style.

The drawings by Tom Purvis are almost as important as the matter; for they give a picture, clearer than any words could give, of the havoc wrought by the German bombs. At the same time many of them, like the illustration reproduced in this page, show also the unconquerable attitude of so many of the owners of bombed shops and houses.

Mr. Farson discussed this matter of the Englishman's instinctive courage with a neutral diplomat, who said:—

> I can explain to you the Englishman's immunity to hysteria or even mass sensations. England is a country which knows no great heat and no great cold; there are no extremes of climate. It is a country without hurricanes, cyclones, great droughts, floods or earthquakes. In England there are few newspaper boys who expect to become bank presidents and few bank presidents who expect to drop. No one expects any great change either from climate or from life. Nothing much happens in England . . . or to England. Not yet. Expectations have always been normal. The English have always lived a life in which they could make assumptions which bore some relation to the eventual facts. That accounts for the Englishman's traditional freedom from "nerves."

Fish and the War

There is a grand chapter devoted to a study of night life in St. Martin's-in-the-Fields and the padre, the late Pat McCormack, who walked among the shelterers and laughed with them and helped them to see the funny side of it all.

Another grand chapter is given to a study of the fish market at Billingsgate, and sundry conversations with proprietors of "Wet-Dried-and-Fried" shops—that is to say, shops where you could get fish to cook at home, fish ready to eat (probably wrapped up in a newspaper), or where you could eat your fried fish on the spot.

A large amount of the book is concerned with life in the tube stations—as any book about this period of London's history must be—and it is pleasant to find that Mr. Farson does not paint too prettily-coloured a picture of this branch of night life. In an excellent chapter on Aldwych Tube Station he gives a great many enlightening facts about conditions in the shelters, and the dissatisfaction of the people, not with the conduct of the war, but with the Government red tape necessary before any of the shelter improvements could be put into practice.

As a contrast to this, South Kensington Tube shelter was, to put it in Mr. Farson's own words, "a home from home."

The rest of the book is filled with little tales and anecdotes of the funny side of the bombardment, as well as with little touches of the darker side. It is a book that is worth reading, and worth keeping. When the war is over, people will not believe how they behaved during the Blitzkrieg. This book will remind them.

The Autobiography of Matheson Lang

A Tapestry of Famous Personalities

Mr. Wu Looks Back. By Matheson Lang. London: Paul. 15/- net.

A SHORT while ago we published a review of Julia Neilson's autobiography. There is a great deal in common with that book and the present one, which, to a large extent, covers the same ground. It is a pity that both of these books should appear within so short a space of time, but, then, those who are interested in the stage will not hesitate to read both, and those who are not interested in it would hardly bother to read either of them.

Mr. Lang was brought up in the Highlands of Inverness, and the first chapter is devoted to the period of life spent there and in Cromarty, where he used to pass his summer holidays. In this part of the book there occurs the delightful account of how he first became an actor, or rather how he first decided to become an actor. One night he went with his brother to see the Benson Company in "Romeo and Juliet." The next morning, before breakfast, they insisted on acting some of the scenes with great vigour. This performance caused a considerable uproar, and he was asked by the rest of the family for an explanation. "It means," he replied, "that I am going to be an actor." And so he was; an actor of no mean ability.

The rest of the book, chapter by chapter, page by page, tells the story of his upward path, from a University Dramatic Society, via Louis Calvert's Company, the Benson Company, Mrs. Langtry's Company, and several others to fame and stardom.

By no means the least interesting feature of the book is the account of the foreign tours. Mr. Matheson Lang always will be remembered as "Mr. Wu"; and the book gives a whole chapter to this production. There is a photograph included of the actor in the rôle of Mr. Wu, showing his wonderful make-up. There are many more photographs in the book. Too many, if anything; one gets tired of looking at a selection of pictures all showing one man in different coloured grease-paint and in different costumes, but the same characteristic—and somewhat pompous—poses.

Still there is much to make up for this slight fault; a fault which, indeed, would be regarded by many as a virtue. The autobiography, as a whole, is charming and entertaining. It is full of amusing little anecdotes and stories about some famous people connected with the stage. As the "blurb" wisely points out, it is, indeed, a tapestry of famous personalities and immortal plays.

The War on the High Seas

A Guide to Naval Strategy

Modern Naval Strategy. By Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon and Francis E. McMurtrie. London: Frederick Muller. 8/6 net.

THE present war has rendered obsolete many of the books on naval strategy that were written before the period of the long-distance or dive-bombers as craft operating against ships. This work of Sir Reginald Bacon and Mr. McMurtrie is so up-to-dato that it contains comments upon other naval books written even since the present war started. It is intended as a short, clear and comprehensive guide for the layman.

It is brightly written, and it deals with the subjects that are in the mind of the general public just now—convoys, air attack, amphibious warfare, the problems of the Mediterranean and the Pacific.

The views of the authors upon air attack are very comforting. Owing to the lack of vertical downward velocity, a bomb dropped from an aircraft at 10,000 feet will travel onwards for a mile and a half before reaching the ground, and, they point out, an aeroplane crossing a ship at 250 m.p.h. is over its target for less than half a second. The dive-bomber, on the other hand, has a longer time to aim, and he can place his bombs more accurately, particularly on a stationary ship. Of course, it is easier for the anti-aircraft guns to hit a dive-bomber, and that may explain the substantial losses suffered by the German forces in Sicily when they first attacked Malta.

On the subject of night bombing the authors ask whether it is wise for the British to concentrate on a means to overcome the dangers of the nocturnal visitors. Night bombing, they say, is far more valuable to Britain than to the Axis Powers, or to Russia. They write of the industrial targets that can be attacked by British night bombers; but has Britain not similar targets that may be attacked by her enemies?

One of the best chapters in the book is that on the psychology of strategy. The inspiration to the Navy in such gallant actions as those of the Rawalpindi and the Jervis Bay, or of the attack by the destroyers at Narvik, is mentioned, and a contrast is drawn between the moral of men who are kept in action and of those who stick to harbours. There have been examples of the psychological difference between at least two navies in recent months.

The Life of Henry Longhurst

Golf and Journalism

It Was Good While It Lasted. By Henry Longhurst. London: Dent. 15/- net.

HENRY LONGHURST believes that he "struck lucky" when he started to write for the Evening Standard about golf. "It was a life," he writes, "which took me, first class, at someone else's expense, throughout each spring and summer to some of the loveliest parts of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, to say nothing of twenty odd visits to the continent and a couple to the United States, and brought me into contact all through the year with a succession of new and interesting people in pretty well every walk of life." He was well paid for it, too—somewhere between £2,000 and £3,000 a year apparently.

This book of Longhurst's is not about golf, nor about journalism, but there is a great deal about both those subjects between its covers. It is about his own experiences and the people he met, and, as much of that experience and many of those meetings were in his capacity as a golfer or a journalist, it would, presumably, have been difficult for him to write any other sort of personal book. Let it be said that it is entertaining and quotable. It is a book which the majority of readers will want to talk about.

Mr Longhurst's portraits of golfers, like Henry Cotton and Walter Hagen, are enjoyably informative. Cotton wore Saville row clothes and silk monogrammed shirts. He drove a large motor car, which he had a tendency to park opposite signs saying "No parking." And, "what displeased his rivals more than anything, he made a tremendous amount of money."

Hagen was the only man who could stay up till three in the morning playing bridge, smoking cigars, and stoking up with whiskey and go out and win a championship in the morning. "Others tried, and great was their downfall." With all his candour, Mr. Longhurst is defensive rather than offensive about his subjects.

Two Irish Golfers

Two Irish golfers, Cecil Ewing and James Bruen, come into the story, and Bruen, he says, "may yet become the world's greatest golfer." Killarney also comes into the story, for the author stayed there as a guest of Viscount Castlerosse. He went deer-stalking, and he was at the birth of the golf course laid out beside the Lakes. "Do you think we could make a golf course here?" asked Castlerosse. "We could make the loveliest golf course in the whole world," replied Longhurst. Then they wired for Sir Guy Campbell, the golf architect.

There are nearly forty chapters, and they deal with subjects of such diversity as the Cresta Run and ski-ing, strip tease acts in the United States; Father Coghlin, the radio priest; the Dartmoor Prison mutiny; Beaverbrook's hatred of the old school tie, and of Eton in particular; the "guying" of the play, "Young England," and the charm of The Times's Golfing Correspondent. A remarkable thing is that Mr. Longhurst contrives to cram into his book a great deal of information about every part of the passing show that touched him, and his style and freshness make it all extraordinarily interesting. There are many illustrations.

A Humorous Miscellany

Laughter Parade. Edited by Anthony Armstrong. London: Faber and Faber. 8/6 net.

THERE is so much to depress one at the present moment that few people feel like reading so-called "heavy" books. As a result of this there has been a large number of humorous books published. The latest—and undoubtedly the best—of these books is "Laughter Parade."

It is a selection of Mr. Anthony Armstrong's ideas of what is funny. And that should be a good enough recommendation for it. If you want further recommendation—there are articles in it by Jerome K. Jerome, Stephen Leacock, P. G. Wodehouse, A. P. Herbert, W. W. Jacobs and Anthony Armstrong himself. And there are hundreds of others, but there is no room to mention the half of them.

The subject matter is as varied as are the writers—shaving, boxing, sermons, wives (of course), cricket, tourists and the waltz.

A grand book to open now and then when you're feeling depressed.

The Autobiography of a Professional Soldier

Evening Tattoo. By Brigadier-General A. F. U. Green, C.M.G., D.S.O. London: Stanley Paul. 15/-.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GREEN is a professional soldier, who rose from the position of a cadet at Woolwich in 1896 to become the youngest brigadier-general in the British Army during the Great War. He is now a private in the Home Guard.

His autobiography, which is a mixture of political and military theorising, reminiscence and mess-room humour, is as uneven as his career has been.

For most of his life he was connected with the administrative side of the Army, and his account of the problems that faced a supply officer during 1914-1918 will be of more interest to the serving officer than to the layman.

Unfortunately, Brigadier-General Green, though he may have been an efficient officer, is a muddled writer, and seems to be unable to distinguish the trivial from the vitally important. We are not at all interested in the score that old Jumbo So-and-so made at cricket in Gibraltar in the year such-and-such, but we do want to hear more about his experiences as a courtmartial officer, or what kind of man was Foch, or why the Portuguese Army collapsed in the spring of 1918, or the inner story of the Armistice Commission to Spa in 1918-1919.

And all too often the humour is of the chestnut variety. Army jokes can be as good as any other kind—but not if they arrived in Britain with Julius Cæsar.

The Ghost

An Early-morning Reverie

THERE was an eerie stillness as I wended my way along Patrick street. Bright moonlight on a powdering of frost gave to the old Liberty an appearance of a fairy city. I was tired and meditative—tired by nocturnal toil and meditating about a metaphorical rattling of dry bones at a meeting of the Old Dublin Society.

As I skirted the western railing of the Cathedral a distant clock chimed. It was a quarter to two. Somewhere to my left were Marsh's Library and the site of an ancient deanery; and nearby, too, were the Cabbage Garden and Naboth's Vineyard.

Was it really worth while (I asked myself) bothering about details in the private life of a great man who is dead these two hundred years, or about new theories of an old story? After all, there is plenty of work to keep my mind busy.

Still striving to arouse myself from reverie, I had turned into the Close, and was approaching the Deanery gateway, when, without any warning, I was overcome by an etxremely discomfiting ailment. A vertigo seized me, and I had a strange sensation of deafness. Then, I believe, I faded out for a while, and when I came to myself all my surroundings had become darkened; but this darkness (I remarked, hopefully) might not have been a physical or mental symptom, but merely a clouding of the moon.

I was still dizzy, and sinking inwardly, when from somewhere in the gloom a low, sad voice muttered: "Ménière, Ménière."

I looked around, startled, and in the dim light reflected from a half-blacked-out electric bulb I saw the shade of an elderly gentleman clad in clerical garb. He was frail-looking, but, despite his years, he had the alert, upright stature which distinguishes the physical training enthusiast. Even in my distress I was curious enough to wonder who he might be, this benighted cleric, who, I assumed, had come through the deanery gate.

"Ménière," I repeated. "Is that your name, sir?"

"No, no," he replied. "'Tis that is your complaint. Do not fear it. I myself suffered it during nigh on fifty years, but neither Arbuthnot nor Dun, nor any of the medicos at Griselda Steevens's Hospital, knew it by that name; and I had not the genius to invent it. I am suffering from a mild fit of it now. You rest awhile."

I had a vague impression that I knew something about this chance-met wayfarer whose moral support was encouraging me to shake off my ménèrie, as he termed it. There was something familiar about the set of his shoulders and the saucy, bird-like poise of his head. But, why the quaint, square-toed shoes? Why the wig? So early in the morning, in St. Patrick's Close! The absurdity set me aghast. I stared at him, astonished. And then, slowly it dawned upon me that (delirium or no delirium) there was a figure out of a Bindon painting. I was afraid, although there was nothing about him to arouse fear. He looked a companionable spirit. Yet, one never knows. . . It might be a safe bet (I thought) to felicitate him by taking up his line of conversation.

"So you, too, are ill, sir? You ought to rest awhile." I gestured toward the Cathedral. "Go in and rest."

At that his manner changed completely, and he answered in the halting voice of one suddenly burdened with a weight of sorrow: "I cannot rest. Men will not let me rest."

"I understand," I sympathised. "They never hold their tongue. . ."

"'Let them dabble in the dung,'" he completed the quotation. "I wrote that about politicians, and it fits factitious scribblers and other men with inquisitive minds. Let them search my works for fun, and there they may find wisdom; or prattle about me and my compatriots, to make more fun. Those are but worldly diversions, and they matter not to me; but persistence in raising doubts about intimate, sacred matters is an abomination to the spirit."

"Who are they?" I asked. "Who disturb your rest?"

"Groups of men and women—they are many. Wilde published the story that I and Stella were brother and sister, and to-night her namesake told an assembly that we were uncle and niece. The thought of it should distort their faces for shame."

"It should," I agreed. "But now it is said that recently some interesting documents were found in Dublin.

"What can they be, these documents which for so long have lain unnoticed?"

"Something about Abegail Errick."

"Or Eric, or Erric, or Erricke, or Herric, or Herricke, or Heyric. The branches of the family adopted almost every conceivable derivative—saving Hayrick and Esrache." The little word-play on the nomenclature brought a momentary gleam of merriment to his features. "But," he went on, "Abegail was the Herrick mentioned, I believe, in the will of Anne Herricke, who died at Wigston Magna in 1652. There was nothing at all mysterious about Abegail coming to Dublin."

"She came with Jonathan Swift," I prompted.

"Yes, with my father. They were honest man and wife, and of honourable families. They had poetry on both sides, you must know—Dryden and, I maintain, Herrick."

"Some people say," I ventured, "that every advantage you and your family had was attributable to the beneficence of the Temple family."

"People say! Advantages! From the Temples!" He was not violently angry, but appeared to become charged with compressed scorn. "All I had from the Temples was some years of degrading servitude at Moor Park—Hester and the library only made it tolerable. There I had to do 'everything a cruel master could require from a slave employed for daily hire.' Probably you know the lines"

I assured him I had read the poem; then I asked:

"What advantages had your father and your uncle?"

"Neither of them had any advantages from the Temples. My uncle, Godwin, was a capable lawyer, whose abilities were recognised by an Ormonde, who had him appointed Attorney-General of the Palatine of Tipperary. He did very well for himself in Ireland; so my father and two other brothers decided to come over and try their fortunes here. They lived in an adventurous age. It was Godwin—not a Temple—who had my father employed as a deputy to the Steward of the King's Inns, and afterwards my father's diligence was rewarded with the stewardship. That office was not a sinecure. Many of the Benchers were tardy in the settlement of their accounts, and, as the world knows, his wife was left dependent on Godwin."

"Godwin, I have read, was a kindly man."

"He was. He took my mother into his home, and there I was born. And he it was who made himself responsible for my education. (I remember that once I retorted that he 'gave me the education of a dog'; but then I was ill and angry; afterwards I was sorry.)"

I thought the wraith was about to be overcome by his melancholy, but he went on wistfully: "The story is a simple, straightforward one, about which the facts are known. Yet, even after two hundred years men will peep and pry and, as my godson's boy has it, seek to create proof when innuendo fails. The time was when I could raise my voice and wield a pen to flout these devils of publicists; but now there is none to keep them quiet—and I cannot rest."

Suddenly he challenged me: "Are you, too, a publicist?"

Apologetically, abashed, I made the admission: "In a very modest way, sir, I am."

"There may be salvation in modesty, or mediocrity (he soliloquised); for the remembrance of the publicist who achieves greatness may be besmirched and his mortal remains desecrated—as mine were—by men who come after him."

"Do you mean me, sir?"

"Yes, you. If you become great you will not be judged by your works alone. Do (he entreated) take a lesson from me. Your bones may be disinterred and handed around in the salons of Dublin, or stolen and taken to America; the honesty of your forebears may be doubted, and your parents called out of their names—although their associations be of no useful interest; the cause of the indisposition from which now you are suffering may two centuries hence be diagnosed as social disease, excessive drinking, over-eating, lunacy, sexual indulgence, or unrequited love . . ."

"But," I interrupted him, "to what purpose? Who would benefit by it?"

"Nobody would benefit by it, but the savants and the dilettanti would be satisfying their curiosity. Your every written word may be misconstrued to support vile theories about your mental state and processes and your actions and reactions."

"Probably," I agreed, "although, after all, they hardly can psycho-analyse a ghost."

Instantly I was sorry I said that. It startled him; but he raised an indulgent smile. "That is another newfangled term—old Doctor Whalley would not have understood it; but you have spoken a truth. They can not psycho-analyse a ghost. . ."

He vanished.

The moon still shone brightly as I turned into St. Stephen's Green. Somewhere a clock struck two; and I was wondering if it was really worth while bothering about details in the life of a great man who is dead these two hundred years.

The Collapse of France

No Mere Military Defeat

Farewell France. By Oscar Paul. London: Gollancz. 6/- net.

IT will be a many a year before the complete story of the fall of France can well be written or even attempted. In all history there are few parallels to the sudden and overwhelming disaster which brought a great Power to her knees in so incredibly short a time. And, more important still, what should never be forgotten are the facts that only one out of France's four great armies ever went in battle, that three consequently never saw defeat, and that the seemingly impregnable Maginot line might, indeed, have been impregnable, had not its defenders been ordered by their own officers to surrender or withdraw. No less than 3,000,000 soldiers, at a modest estimate, never entered battle at all; the army on the Italian front barely made contact with the enemy.

National Unity

Modern warfare is based on more than mere military strategy. There is a diplomatic and political strategy which of recent years has become of major importance. France suffered no mere military defeat; her national confidence had been undermined, and the national unity, essential to the prosecution of any major war, was conspicuous by its absence.

The author of this penetrating analysis is an Austrian journalist who was forced to seek refuge in France after the collapse of the Dollfuss régime. A Social Democrat and a close friend of M. Leon Blum, he remained in France even after the armistice, and he is, consequently, acutely aware of all the cross-currents of French life and thought at the time of her darkest despair.

He writes interestingly and well, with a sufficient knowledge of the background of French history and a considerable acquaintance with present tendencies. His book embodies high praise of certain French social classes and severe condemnation of others.

It discusses in some detail the political history and background of the leading lights in the Vichy Administration, and provides us with considerable detail on the necessity for national unity against the dangers of external aggression. Many lessons for the politicians and democrats of every country—not excluding our own—are to be found in "Farewell France."

Some New Books in Irish

Fairy Tales, the Gaeltacth and "Eire"

Eachtra an Phortain agus Scealta eile. Micheal O Cionnfhaolaidh. Dublin: An Gum. 1/6 net.

Caidhpin Dearg; An Greassaidhe agus na Slabhraí; Snuadh-bhan agus Caordhearg; Luidin O Luraidhe. Dublin: Fallons, Ltd. 3d. each net.

MICHEUL O CIONNFHAOLAIDH gives our juvenile friends a very readable collection of adventures, grave and gay, which are met by a venturesome youth on his setting out "into the world." Most of our hero's embarrassments befall him while fishing or farming along the Southern seaboard, and the many strange occurrences recounted should absorb the interest of the youthful reader. The Irish is simple and Southern; the illustrations are of particular eloquence, and the sturdy binding of the book will tide it over much knocking about.

To those of more tender age Messrs. Fallons's illustrated translations from Grimm are bound to appeal, and at the price of threepence each are really outstanding value. The print is large and clear, and in the four booklets Little Red Riding Hood, Hop o' my Thumb, Snow-white, the Golden Goose, the Dancing Slippers and many other perennial favourites once more appear to delight the imagination.

Mam as mo Mhala; Sean Mhac Meanman. Dublin: An Gum. 2/- net.

IN his five-line preface the author describes "Mám as mo Mhála" as written to depict, to the minds of those who are too young to remember it, the old-time life of his own Irish-speaking countryside. His book well justifies his apologia One feels the book is genuine; it chronicles the passing of a civilisation which the author knew; it breathes from every page the aura of the Tirconnell Gaeltacht of a generation ago.

Whether Mr. Mhac Meanman is picturing the vivid shanachie at the nightly 'airneáil, or whether he himself turns shanachie to relate some tale, always the unfolding of his tale discloses a dozen "angles" of the Gaelic way of life.

The characters are notably well delineated, and the style and language are well in line with Mr. Mhac Meanman's best efforts. The richness of the Donegal idiom, of course, offers inevitable drawbacks to the average reader, and the author's way out may not be the happiest: one is somewhat taken aback to find a vocabulary appended to what is, after all, a work of fiction.

Eire—Bliainiris Gaedheal. Edited by Ciaran O Nuallain. Dublin: Cahill. 2/6 net.

THE 1940 "Eire," as the editor points out, gives the lie to those who prophesied that an Irish journal of high cultural aspirations could not run to a second number. The aim of the publication—to incorporate annually the choicest work of living Irish writers—is once more accomplished, and another invaluable issue of "Eire" is now presented.

Throughout, the highest level of literature is maintained, and Ciarán O Nualláin can in no way be said to have departed from the high standards set last year by Riobárd O Faracháin.

Among the many fine contributions are two engrossing short stories and two thoughtful philosophical essays: Tomás Bairéad, in his "Choice of Two Escapes," builds with great technical skill a moving drama around the sordid life of a slum girl, and Ciarán O Nualláin excels in his treatment of the similarly depressing subject of a soliloquising suicide—"The Land of Sleep."

Pádhraic O Domhnalláin's "Head Without Wisdom" brings an inquiring mind to bear on the old adage, "Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise," and shows that true wisdom is the wisdom of knowing oneself, the wisdom which directs the individual honourably, happily and peaceably through life. Canon Mac Ghiolla Cheara writes a thought-inspiring examination of "What's Wrong With the World," considering civilisation in general, psychology, the consolation of death, and man's part in the Divine Plan. An interesting story of Cloghaneely and Gweedore, in the tradition which he has already handled so well, is written by Máire, who thus returns after a long period of silence, and Brian O Nualláin brings out his biting, elfin humour in "The Poor Mouth"; as usual, there is more than a little cynical truth behind his façade of comedy.

Ciarán O Nualláin's second contribution—"The Detective Novel"—is a controversial and exceedingly well-written essay on the vogue of the detective story, in which he criticises the reluctance of Irish writers in general to adopt it as a form of literature. A very amusing satire on uninvited counsellors is written by Caoimhgín O Nualláin; and Séamus O Néill has translated for us a readable story of the vine-growing district of Provence.

On the serious side there is a masterly treatment of the life of Peadar O Doirnín by Domhnall Mac Grianna; and other scholarly articles are written by Sorcha Ní Ghuairim on traditional music, by Earnán de Blaghd on the drift to the cities, and by Father Pádraig de Brun on the development of poetry. It is a pity that the only piece of poetry in this volume is one solitary poem by An Suibhneach Meann, who treats "unpoetical" subjects so well; but next year's issue, perhaps, will see the muse more extensively represented.

Altogether, the 1941 "Eire" is a wonderful half-crown's worth, and truly described as "Le trésor gaélique de l'année."

POEM

By G. M. BRADY.

FEELING between shadows, your light
Has lamped so many eyes,
So many eyes
Dulled by the gray of grief.
Thrusting across silences, your voice
Inhabited the heedless desert
Where their cries
Had drowned in wells of sand.
Touching the abject shoulder,
Easing the restless sleeper,
You have set the flourish
Of your hand
Upon the bones of fear.
You, sinewed and powerful with love,
Have moved away the stone blocking the crypt.

Tales of Rural India

The Red Tortoise, and other stories. Told by N. Gangulee. London: The India Society. 3/6 net.

AS the net profits of this publication will be given to the Red Cross, Irish readers will not regard the price as too high for such a slender volume. It contains about a dozen tales related by an old Indian story-teller named Baba Trinco, or "Father" Trigunananda, who was very popular with the children of a pretty village in the delta o fthe Ganges. His stories are simple, like children's fairy tales, but they contain an element of humour, or point some moral, which makes them acceptable to adults who are not very sophisticated.

There is, for example, the story of Gauba's trip to Paradise hanging to the tail of the white elephant. Unfortunately, Gauba's talkative wife and his pet monkey had to come, too, and then the wife's relations and the village people attached themselves to the party, and with a long string of human beings clinging to his tail the elephant started. Gauba's wife could not stop talking and when her exasperated husband took his hands from the elephant's tail to show her how big the water melons in Paradise were the whole string of human beings fell to earth from far above the peaks of the Himalayas. The monkey was cleverer and he got to Paradise.

After the War

The Application of Christianity to Finance

The Rule of Equity. By J. Taylor Peddie. London: Williams and Norgate. 12/6 net.

IT does not seem improbable that one result of this war will be a revision of the world's finances on a completely new basis. To carry on in face of such accumulated debts as will face most nations, is unthinkable. The question is in what direction will the new financial schemes lead the peoples to their betterment. Mr. Taylor Peddie has no doubts as to the way, and he leaves the average reader with few either when this book has been read.

Briefly, Mr. Peddie believes that in the application, the rigid application, of the basic principles of Christianity, lies the panacea for a stabilised and prosperous world. He writes: "The basic principles of the finest economic system conceivable are to be found in the Old Testament, and if these were given a positive shape in the way originally intended, Christianity would be restored to the status originally planned for it." The prime means of realising this is to be through the Rule of Equity, which means that all economic measures are bound together by simple numerical laws, whose adjustments will regulate all problems of supply and demand for the future.

The working out of these laws is explained with an admirable clarity, and, though one may find fault from time to time with the author's interpretations of certain Scriptural texts and his exegetical theories, there is no doubt whatever that, when he is writing of actual finance, he is on solid ground, indeed, and is writing with impressive knowledge and integrity of principle.

Storm in a Village. By Jocelyn Playfair. Hodder and Stoughton. 8/3.

Murder will out. Or love finds a way. Roddy Stane, husky, Gary Cooperish young author, rents a cottage in the village of Somers Hinton and falls in love with Anna, lovely wife of the local squire, Sir Henry Somers-Cole. Sir Henry's brother, Wallace, is found brutally murdered, and both motive and circumstantial evidence point to Stane as the culprit. But he is obviously much too charming a young man to make a likely murderer, and the main interest of the story is in seeing how Anna and Sergeant Derwent, perkiest, shrewdest and brightest boy of the local police, capture the real criminal before Scotland Yard can interfere.

Good of its kind. The clues fit together as neatly as the pieces of a jigsaw puzzle, but, as for there being a "Storm in the Village," we noticed nothing but the gentlest of zephyrs. There is an excellent cover design by Norton Sale.

The Church of England Year Book

The Official Year-Book of the Church of England, 1941. London: Church Assembly and Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. 7/6 net.

THE statistics made available in the 1941 issue of the "Blue Book of the Church of England" show the results of four months of war in the latter part of 1939, and part of the result of pre-war tension immediately preceding that. Decreases in the numbers of Sunday School scholars and ordinations, baptisms, confirmations, and voluntary offerings, are revealed.

Apart from the statistics, the book includes all the usual features—the Constitution of the Church Assembly, the Representation of the Laity Measure, summaries of all the measures which have received the Royal Assent since its establishment, Who's Who in the Church Assembly, the Summary of Legal Information, and full records of Church organisations, both at home and abroad. The large scale map, in two colours, showing the dioceses of England and Wales again is included.

MINERALS DEVELOPMENT ACT, 1940.

NOTICE OF THE MAKING OF THE MINERALS ACQUISITION (SLIEVEARDAGH COAL FIELD) ORDER, 1941.

Notice is hereby given that the Minister for Industry and Commerce has made a Minerals Acquisition Order dated the 6th day of February, 1941, compulsorily acquiring, by virtue of Section 14 (1) of the Minerals Development Act, 1940, certain minerals consisting of all those mines, veins and seams of coal known as The Slieveardagh Coalfield, and also all other minerals lying on or under certain townlands or parts of town lands in the Barony of Slieveardagh, in the County of Tipperary, specified in the Order. The town lands and parts of townlands specified in the Order and the areas thereof are set out in the Schedule to this Notice.

A map delineating the lands in question is available for inspection in the Offices of the Geological Survey, 14 Hume street, Dublin, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Monday to Friday, and 10 a.m. and 12 p.m. on Saturday.

Copies of the Order may be obtained at the Offices of the Department of Industry and Commerce, Lord Edward street, Dublin.

By Order of the Minister for Industry and Commerce.

R. C. FERGUSON,
Secretary,
Department of Industry and Commerce,
Dublin.
Date: 6th February, 1941.

Waiting and Watching

Whether by accident or design, the attention of the whole world has been switched during the last few days from Western Europe to the Balkans. Since the idea of the Nervenkrieg was invented diplomatic feints have become commonplaces, and belligerent propaganda is at once so efficient and subtle that it is quite impossible to separate the false—or what is even more important, the half-truth—from the truth. Since Christmas everybody has been anticipating a German offensive in the Balkan peninsula. It is admitted generally that there are large numbers of German troops in Rumania, and that the Government of Bulgaria is terrified of an early invasion from the North. Important bridgeheads have been prepared along the Danube, and, although public opinion in Bulgaria—in so far as there is any public opinion outside official circles in that country—is more than anxious to maintain a strict neutrality, it is felt that any attempt to resist a possible German thrust towards either Salonika or Asia Minor would be tantamount to national suicide. If, therefore, the Germans decide to invade Bulgaria, they probably will meet with no serious opposition, always on the assumption, of course, that the Russians remain passive. There is a traditional, almost a mystic, attachment between Bulgaria and Russia; and if the Bolsheviks should advise King Boris to put up a fight against an invasion, a totally new situation would be created. For the moment, however, the Russians are most unlikely to take any active part in Balkan affairs. They will intervene if, and when, they see a favourable opportunity to extend their influence towards the South; in the meanwhile they will bide their time. If Germany should decide to make for Salonika, the goodwill, or at least the immobilisation, of the Yugoslavs will be essential. The Southern Slavs have no love either for the Germans or for the Italians; but, in common with all other small nations, they are forced by circumstances to be realists. The side on which their bread is buttered is the side that they are anxious to take; but they realise that, in present circumstances, guns are more important than butter, and, frankly, they are afraid. For that reason the Yugoslav Prime Minister, Monsieur Tsevetkovitch, and his Foreign Minister, Monsieur Cincar Markovitch, paid a visit yesterday to Herr Hitler at Berchtesgaden. The subject of their conversation with the Fuehrer, which lasted for about three hours, has not been revealed in any detail. We learn that "questions of common interest" were discussed; but the compiler of the official bulletin must have an ironic sense of humour; for he referred to the "traditional friendship" between the Germans and the Yugoslavs. The fact that Prince Paul, the Yugoslav Regent, did not make the trip to Berchtesgaden in person may, or may not, be significant. His personal views do not matter much. What does matter, from Herr Hitler's point of view, is that Germany shall have some guarantee of Yugoslavia's quiescence in the event of a Balkan offensive.

There can be small doubt that, whatever may be Herr Hitler's plans for his spring offensive, they have been in preparation for a long time. The German military machine does not improvise; in this fact lie at once its strength and its weakness. In 1914, when Russia's sudden invasion of East Prussia caused a certain amount of alarm at von Moltke's headquarters, with the result that certain divisions were withdrawn from Belgium, Germany already lost the war simply because her magnificently conceived Schlieffen Plan was thrown slightly out of gear. Is it possible that some such confusion of military ideas is influencing the present situation in South-Eastern Europe? When France collapsed last June, and Italy entered the war, no member of the "Axis" Powers' High Commands could have anticipated what has been happening in Albania and North Africa since the beginning of December. Marshal Graziani's army in Libya has been put almost out of action. Italy's position in East Africa—in Eritrea, in Abyssinia, and in Somaliland—has been threatened; the Regia Aeronautica has almost disappeared from the African skies, and the Italian Navy has been unable to obtain mastery of the Mediterranean. In Albania the small Greek Army has more than held its own. Aided by the British Air Force, and supplied to a large extent by the British Fleet, the Greeks have dealt a series of heavy blows at the Italian forces. They also have done much damage to Italian prestige. In South-Eastern Europe, and, above all, in the Arab lands of the Middle East, prestige plays a vital part in politics. Whereas six months ago the odds on an "Axis" victory seemed to be almost overwhelming, a vastly different situation exists to-day; and the Bulgars, as well as the Rumanians and Yugoslavs, must be in a torment of doubt and misgiving. So far as one can judge in the absence of precise news, the Turks are standing fast by their alliance with Great Britain; and they are doughty fighters in any cause. Their attitude of independence has been encouraged greatly by the British and Greek successes against the Italians, and it is most unlikely that they will consent in any circumstances to turn a blind eye to the passage of "Axis" troops through their territory en route to the Suez Canal, or even that they will remain indifferent to an invasion of Bulgaria, with, or without, King Boris's approval. If the reports of the British landing of parachute troops in the Calabria district be accurate, another fillip will be given to Balkan independence. As we write there is no confirmation of the Italian reports from British sources; but the adoption of such audacious tactics by Great Britain would give the Balkan peoples seriously to think. In the past the initiative on almost every occasion has been taken by the "Axis" Powers, with the natural result that they have gained enormous prestige among the smaller nations. Now that the boot, to some extent, is on the other foot, at any rate in the Mediterranean, the consequences will be interesting to watch.

Ireland's Roads

Nearly all the County Councils by this time have adopted their estimates of expenditure for the financial year 1941-'42, and in every instance, by reason of the rising costs in every direction, these estimates have shown an increase over expenditure in the current period and over normal expenditure in recent years. Such increases are inevitable in the abnormal times in which we live now, and County Councillors, in a natural desire to save the ratepayers as much as possible, have been examining the figures before them almost with a microscope in the hope that they may find some item that can be reduced. It is the duty of County Councillors, of course, to safeguard their ratepayers—though a regrettably large number of them seem to regard this part of their duties as the sole concern of their existence; but their first and paramount ambition ought to be for the welfare of the territory under their care and for its continual improvement. When the interests of the ratepayers, as individuals, begin to take precedence of any other consideration of the County Councils, the Councils are failing in the tasks for which they were appointed. In virtually every estimate so far presented an attempt has been made to reduce expenditure by lopping a substantial sum off the budget for road work. This action, apparently, is regarded as a justifiable economy—though how any man in his senses can regard road-building, in view of the present condition of most Irish roads, as an extravagance, is beyond our understanding. On Thursday, a motion at Cork County Council, demanding a fifty per cent. reduction in road expenditure, was defeated by only a small majority; and even then, the County Surveyor's estimate of £79,000, as the absolute minimum upon which he could carry out necessary reconstruction and repairs, was reduced by 25 per cent. The chief argument put forward in favour of a reduction was that motor traffic had been reduced so considerably by the petrol shortage—as private motoring has come virtually to an end and as normal receipts from motor tax may come to a similar end before the year is out—that the Council ought not to continue to spend such huge sums of money on the roads. Admittedly, the roads will receive less wear, and, consequently, will be in need of fewer repairs, but is any Council acting wisely if it decides to discontinue the work of making new roads and remaking old ones? Road building not only is a necessity, but is one of the few industries in this country which need not be affected adversely by the war. We have all the materials readily available; we have a body of unemployed men—swelling almost daily, unfortunately—who are urgently in need of work. Either relief money or employment must be found for thousands of able-bodied men, and it is better to pay them in work than to pay them in idleness. The number of industries in Eire which have not been damaged, at least in some degree, directly by the war could be counted on the fingers of one hand, and road-building is among them. We regret, therefore, that so many Councils have decided to make drastic reductions in the budget for roads, and if the unprecedented virtues of such industries as road-building at the present time do not recommend themselves to the country's county councillors, we would beg the Government to take whatever steps may be necessary to ensure the continuance of this highly advantageous and much-needed work.

Cooking for Boys

At a recent meeting of the Women's Social and Progressive League in Dublin, the subject of domestic economy in Irish schools was discussed, and the view was expressed that boys, as well as girls, should be taught this science. Miss Caith Clancy, the teacher, who expressed this opinion, said that not nearly enough domestic economy was taught in the primary schools, and that boys should all learn to sew on a button, to darn a rent and to cook a plain meal. There always comes a time in a man's life, she said, when he will have to do these things for himself, and, up to the present, Irish boys have been spoiled by their mothers, and later by their wives. Miss M. M. Lynch agreed that domestic economy was neglected in the schools, and that boys should not be exempt from it. She pointed out that they have a natural aptitude for it, and that most of the world's famous cooks have been men. It is true that boys have a flair for cooking; the number of comparatively young boys who can produce an appetising meal from very limited camp resources should be ample proof of this statement. If the cooking classes were made entirely optional in the boys' schools—and if the option rested with the boys rather than the parents—it is extremely likely that the class would be a success. From the point of view of the teachers, the scheme might prove to be a mixed blessing. The boys probably would eat the more appetising ingredients on the spot, and use the less appetising ones as ammunition in an attack on their neighbours, more or less as they use the chemicals in the science laboratory when the master happens to be looking the other way. If, on the other hand, the classes were made compulsory, it is highly probable that the boys would take united action against the system. They would feel most offended and indignant to think that they should be forced to behave like girls; and who can blame them? The greatest sin in the eyes of a schoolboy is to behave like a girl. They might cook of their own free will, and regard it as a bit of fun; if the authorities attempted to force them to do so there would be trouble. In any case, the study of domestic economy is of no great importance to boys. The school curriculum is too large as it is; if domestic economy were added to an already immense list, either the study of the three R's would have to be reduced further, or the school hours would have to be lengthened. Neither of these steps would be desirable, or, indeed, advisable.

HOPES AND FEARS IN TOKYO

WATCHING NEW U.S. NAVAL MOVES

THE Japanese Press is divided between fears that America will force a crisis if Japan's southward advance goes too far, and hopes that the President's latest remarks may have been largely bluff, says a "Times" telegram from Tokyo last night.

The latter view is based on the opinion that the United States will not send its fleet to Singapore while the European struggle remains undecided. Other Japanese observers in America interpret the President's remarks as meaning that the United States will act promptly if Japan moves South.

The new American Naval Budget contains a proposal for increased naval and air establishments at Tutuila, in Samoa, which the Japanese find significant. The Cabinet spokesman to-day declined to make any formal comment, but said that the projected strengthening of the Tutuila defences was "very important." In view of Samoa's remoteness, its importance in Japan's strategical plans has hitherto escaped notice. Its new importance consists in Samoa's situation between Hawaii and New Zealand, which, according to the Asahi, makes it a link in American plans for encircling Japan, and enabling the American Fleet to connect with Manila and Singapore, via Australia.

Political speculation here is concentrated on British and American reactions to Japan's southward advance. The British reinforcements in Malaya, though little discussed by the Press, have received due notice, and are clearly understood to confirm the warning given by the London Correspondent of the Asahi that Great Britain will resist further

In Japan the public is being instructed through the Press that Singapore not only obstructs the southward advance, but is one of the chief obstacles to a settlement of the China war. It is an obstacle which might be removed either by Singapore passing out of British hands or by its being "contained" by new fortifications, which might arise on Thai or Indo-Chinese territory. But the part which the American Fleet might play is all-important, and it is highly probable that the immediate prospects of peace or war in the Pacific depend on the view that the Japanese Government forms about American policy over Singapore.

In an interview with the Washington Correspondent of Nichi Nichi, Admiral Nomura is reported to have said that a German success in a spring Blitzkrieg campaign will dispose the United States to cultivate Japan's friendship, while a German failure will cause America to strengthen her forces in the Pacific, with the result that Japanese-American relations will suffer. At the same time Admiral Nomura warned the Japanese people not to under-value America's power of waging total war.—(Copyright, per Press Association.)

OUTLOOK IN THE FAR EAST

SITUATION SAID TO BE "NO WORSE"

Britain Keeps Close Eye On Events

JAPANESE ENVOY ON PEACE IN PACIFIC

THE Far Eastern situation seemed somewhat eased yesterday with the Australian statement that there was no further deterioration, and the display of outward calm in the Dutch Pacific possessions. From Batavia came word that some activity was apparent in official quarters, but on all sides it was insisted "nothing unusual is happening."

There was no evidence of extraordinary naval or military measures.

From Saigon no question of an increase of Japanese pressure on Indo-China was reported, but there was an authoritative opinion, according to Associated Press, that the Japanese were not making further naval concentrations at the port of Haipong.

From Bangkok it was reported that a high Government authority had said that Britain had informed Thailand of measures to defend the Malayan frontier, and that Thailand had reciprocated by giving the British information on their own frontier defence actions.

A broadcast by the Japanese News Agency, Domei, from Tokyo, which was heard in New York to-day, said that the Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Yosuke Matsuoka, had told a Committee of the House of Representatives that he would utilise the present Japanese-Russian trade negotiations "to readjust relations between the two countries."

While the new Japanese Envoy in Washington expressed to President Roosevelt yesterday his resolution to achieve a "better understanding" between their two countries, and thereby preserve the peace of the Pacific, Japanese Press reports, quoted by the Paris radio last night, said that relations between the United States and Japan were "at the point of breaking off."

The Far East, showing Japan's relation to Singapore, Australia and American and British islands in the Pacific.

FEELING IN AUSTRALIA

The Australian War Cabinet conferred with the Defence Chiefs and discussed the latest information from overseas in Sydney yesterday. It was stated that "no further deterioration" in the sharpened Far Eastern outlook had been disclosed, a Press Association telegram stated last night.

Mr. Fadden, the acting Prime Minister, issued a statement at the conclusion of the conferences saying:—

"The War Cabinet received reports on the progress of the Australian defence programme, which were discussed in the light of the most recent cables about the international situation.

"The people of the Commonwealth may rest assured that the warnings issued were regarded as necessary, so that everyone might be seized with the need for placing the nation's interests first.

"It is well for me to say that, as in the last war, Australians can, and will, face any crisis calmly and with deliberate purpose."

In London yesterday it was pointed out that, although the position in the Far East has been under observation for some time, and although it still requires watching, it should not be assumed that there are any new developments which make the position sensational.

Close contacts are being maintained with the Netherlands Government in London.

A RESOURCES SURVEY

Later messages from Sydney last night disclosed that the meeting of the Australian War Council decided that a survey of all the country's resources should be made with a view to ensuring that all shall be used advantageously, since it is essential that the full resources of the nation be marshalled for the war effort.

The Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Curtin, has announced his support of the Government's measures. "I have complete confidence in the work being done here," he said. "I assure Australians that what is in hand is rightfully in hand. We are in agreement with what the Government is doing."

AUSTRALIA'S NATIONALS

Also issued in Sydney yesterday was the following statement by Sir Frederick Stewart, Minister for External Affairs:—

"Although the warnings recently given to British subjects to leave Japan applied also to Australians, no request has gone from Australia to the Australian Minister in Tokyo, Sir John Latham, to give a direct warning. There are no indications that Japanese subjects intend to leave Australia."

Japanese firms in Sydney state, and the Japanese Consul-General confirms, that no instructions have been received advising them to leave Australia, and they do not believe that there is any danger of war. They seem to regard the warning statement issued by the Acting Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition as unduly alarming.

"MORE SERIOUS"

NEW ZEALAND PREMIER'S VIEW

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

AUCKLAND (N.Z.) Friday.

Mr. Peter Fraser, Prime Minister of New Zealand, said to-night that his Government had received information which indicated that the position overseas was becoming increasingly serious.

He said that the continuing deterioration of the situation had become of the utmost gravity, and the War Cabinet and Government were giving daily and even hourly attention to these matters.

SOUTH SEAS DRIVE

JAPAN UNLIKELY TO MAKE BIG MOVE NOW

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHUNGKING, Friday.

Certain Chinese quarters here to-day believe that Japan is still hesitating before launching a drive in the South Seas, which she knows will inevitably bring her into a major conflict with Britain. It is argued here that even if Japan agrees to move in the Pacific to support a German blitz in Europe she is unlikely to make an important move until she has good reason to believe the blitz in Europe has a good chance of success.

Japan finds it yet too early for southward expansion, although it will begin sooner or later, it is pointed out. One suggestion is that Japan's hesitation is largely due to fear of Soviet Russia. Even should Russia conclude a non-aggression pact with Japan, the latter will always be exposed to attack from the Soviet, whether her South Seas venture is successful or not.

SPRING OFFENSIVE POSSIBILITIES

If Germany and Japan win in their spring offensives, these circles say that Russia cannot afford to remain idle. On the other hand, if they lose it is all the more certain that Soviet Russia will take advantage of Japan's weakness to make an important move in Asia.

The Chinese papers are filled with reports of Japanese naval concentrations off the French Indo-China and Thailand coasts, as well as those pouring in from Washington and London.

"NOTHING WILL HAPPEN"

At a conference for foreign correspondents in Tokyo yesterday, a Government Information Board spokesman, discussing reports of impending hostilities in the Pacific, said that the atmosphere was serious, and that one must prepare against every possible contingency. He added, however, that, in his view, nothing would happen.

This spokesman also stated that Japan was anxious to maintain and increase peaceful relations with Australia.

Meanwhile reports that the Japanese Fleet is concentrating off Haiphong (Indo-China), and the warning to American citizens in the Far Eastern countries to return home has made the Pacific situation front page news in the United States newspapers. One speculation is that Japan is waging another "war of nerves" to assist the Axis.

INDO-CHINA COAST

JAPANESE WARSHIP PATROL

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

SAIGON, Friday.

Japanese warships were patrolling the entire coast and as far west as Bangkok as "a precaution against possible developments in these waters," declared Japanese newspaper correspondents in Saigon, capital of French Indo-China.

Japanese naval circles did not confirm this statement.

The Japanese correspondents said: Japan was expecting Germany to attempt an invasion of Britain, whereupon "Japan will move against Anglo-American interests in the Orient, and against the Dutch East Indies first attacking Singapore."

BRITISH FORCES NEAR THAILAND

REPORT FROM TOKYO

"Authenticated reports" of the massing of "British Army, Navy and Air Force contingents along the southern and western borders of Thailand," are mentioned in a Bangkok despatch to the Domei News Agency to-day, a Press Association telegram from Tokyo stated last night.

"Concentrations of British Indian troops are reported to be increasing daily along the frontier between Burma and Thailand, whilst troops have also been despatched to Malaya," the despatch adds.

FRIENDSHIP FOR BRITAIN

A telegram from Bangkok yesterday stated that the Government of Thailand, in a communiqué affirming that friendly relations continue to exist between Great Britain and Thailand, says that according to news from various sources now current the British military authorities have stationed land, naval and air forces on the Thai borders adjoining the Federated Malay States and Burma. This may lead some people wrongly to suppose that Great Britain will eventually violate Thai territory, the communiqué continues.

The Government goes on to state that "The friendly relations happily existing between Great Britain and Thailand remain unimpaired, both countries still respect the Treaty and Pact of Non-Aggression concluded between them, and their mutual understanding and sympathy remain cordial in every way."

GREEK RESERVES CALLED UP

ARMY CONTINUES OFFENSIVE

7,000 ITALIANS CAPTURED

ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM.

ATHENS, Friday.

GREEK forces in the Central Albanian sector were reported to-day to have dislodged the Italians from a fortified position in an action described as "of exceptional importance." The Greeks captured one height of great importance and other positions to the north of Klisura. After the Italian withdrawal the enemy dead and wounded were counted in hundreds.

Reports from Greece to-day said that the Government, apparently fearing a German invasion through Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, had called up many additional classes of reservists.

The Greeks attained their objectives at every point, the announced added, quoting late despatches from the front. The Italians were dislodged from all their positions. At three points in particular the results of the engagements were of a decisive nature. At one of these points 7,000 prisoners, including many officers and a particularly heavy amount of war material were captured. At the second point the Italians were pushed back a good distance and more prisoners taken, while at a third point in the battle many prisoners and much more material fell into Greek hands.

GREEK OFFENSIVE

Operations on the Albanian battle front may now be entering a phase of rapid development, the announced said. All along the front line from the northern area, near the Yugoslav border, to the Adriatic coast, eighty miles away, the Greek forces have again assumed the initiative with great vigour. The new Greek offensive follows the conclusion of the Italian counter-attacks, which were beaten back with disastrous losses to the enemy. The Greek advance is general. On the centre of the Albanian battle front the Greek push has been most effective. It began with the capture of a stronghold on a height which the Italians claimed to be impregnable.

After a heavy bombardment by Greek artillery the position became very uncomfortable for the enemy. Then the Greek infantry launched a bayonet charge, supported by Greek warplanes from above, dislodged the Italians and drove them down the hill in utter confusion. The enemy left a great number of dead and wounded on the battlefield. In a general way, the announcer concluded, Italian resistance is said to be weakening, even at points which up to the present were stubbornly defended.

7,000 ITALIAN PRISONERS

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

LONDON, Friday.

The Greek Army to-day continued its offensive all along the 80-mile battle front in Albania, and at one point captured 7,000 Italian prisoners, including many officers, states Athens Radio, quoted by Reuter.

DUBLIN TRAMWAYS DIVIDEND

MAINTAINED AT FOUR PER CENT.

The Dublin United Tramways Co. (1896), Ltd., is maintaining the dividend on the Ordinary stock for 1940 at the figure of 4 per cent. to which it was raised a year ago.

This was made known yesterday when the directors at their meeting considered the company's balance sheet and statement of accounts for the year ended December 31, 1940.

Having set aside the sum of £35,000 to write down premises, the board decided to recommend, subject to final audit, the payment of a final dividend on the Preference stock at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, less income tax. It was also decided to recommend a final dividend on the Ordinary stock at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, less income tax, which, with the interim dividend paid last August, will amount to 4 per cent. for the year 1940, and to carry forward the sum of £21,561, compared with £16,670 brought in.

This time last year £12,000 was placed to reserve for obsolete stores, £10,000 for income tax, and £13,000 for accident insurance.

RUMANIAN ENVOY IN LONDON

REFUSES TO RETURN

M. Radu Florescu, Chargé d'Affaires of the Rumanian Legation in London, and M. Ion Mugru, Press Attaché to the Legation, have refused to obey their Government's instructions to return to Rumania. It is likely that to-day the name of another member of the Legation staff who has also refused will be made known.

Six of the staff left London last night on the first stage of their journey home. There are still six members of the diplomatic staff and about 30 clerical staff to go, but it is understood that some of the latter had already declared their intention to remain in Great Britain.

THE WAR IN AFRICA

BRITISH CAPTURE NEW POSITIONS

GERMAN 'PLANES HELP ITALIANS

PRESS ASSOCIATION TELEGRAM.

NAIROBI, Friday.

THE capture, successively, of the important enemy post of Afmadu, in Italian Somaliland, and of Bulo Erillo, an Italian post on the Juba river, is officially announced here. The large amount of the material captured includes five armoured cars at Afmadu and four armoured cars at Bulo Erillo. The advance on Keren is proceeding.

The text of the communiqué is as follows: "On February 11 our East African troops attacked Afmadu, an important post held by enemy forces. After our heavy raids by South African Air Force units, on February 10, a large proportion of this garrison fled, leaving a few half-hearted defenders. The operation was not only successful, but was carried out without loss to ourselves. Much material, including five armoured cars, was captured. After this success, early in the morning of February 13 units of the East African forces attacked Bulo Erillo, on the Juba River, meeting with strong resistance. The operation was entirely successful, and the enemy abandoned the position. Much material, including four armoured cars, was captured. In the remainder of this theatre South African Air Force units are co-operating, and are rapidly establishing air superiority."

REDUCING KEREN

Progress in Eritrea is reported in to-night's communiqué from British G.H.Q., Cairo. Operations for the reduction of Keren, the key-town, sixty miles north-west of Asmara, the capital, are stated to be proceeding.

Another heavy attack on the Italian island of Rhodes is announced in to-day's official communiqué issued by R.A.F. Headquarters in the Middle East.

The communiqué states: "On the night of February 12-13 heavy bombers of the R.A.F. carried out an attack on the harbour of Rhodes. Several fires were started, which were still burning when our aircraft left the target.

'PLANES DESTROYED

"On the same night heavy and successful bombing attacks were made on the aerodromes at Tirana and Durazzo, hangars and other buildings being subjected to direct hits. Four twin-engined enemy aircraft on the ground were destroyed by fire at Tirana.

"Throughout yesterday concentrated and repeated attacks were made in the Tepeleni area and on military concentrations in and around Duki. Many direct hits were obtained on military targets in Tepeleni and a number of fires started. Bombs were dropped on a military camp north-west of Duki, with direct hits on three buildings and a motor transport column. Considerable damage was also caused to military concentrations south of Duki. An enemy fighter was shot down in flames. Military objectives at Elbasan were also successfully attacked. In the Berat area our bombers were intercepted by a formation of Italian Monoplane fighters and in the ensuing engagement two enemy aircraft were shot down. Two of our bombers failed to return.

ITALIAN RAIDS

"It is now reported that a further fourteen unserviceable aircraft were discovered at Benina and forty at Berka. During the last two days Benina aerodrome has been raided by the enemy, but only slight damage was caused. During the night before last Benghazi was attacked by enemy aircraft believed to be German. Some damage was caused to civil buildings.

"In Italian East Africa our aircraft continued to give support to the Army offensive in Keren region. Direct hits were registered on the railway station at Keren, and a considerable quantity of bombs were dropped on enemy troop concentrations near Mount Amba. Our fighters encountered a number of enemy fighters over Malta yesterday. A Junkers was hit by anti-aircraft fire.

150,000 REGISTERED FOR EVACUATION

On Thursday night 150,000 people had registered under the Government's evacuation scheme for Dublin and Dun Laoghaire. The figure for Thursday was 50,500, or 8,000 greater than for the previous day. The registrations were evenly distributed over all the centres.

Mr. Frank Aiken, Minister for the Co-ordination of Defensive Measures, will speak on the radio to-morrow evening at 10 o'clock on the provision of accommodation for evacuees in reception areas.

REFUSED IN ERROR

In a letter in yesterday's Irish Times a correspondent signing himself "A Father" called attention to the fact that his wife, when endeavouring to register their two children under the evacuation scheme, was told she could not do so. The father, it appears, is in receipt of more than £300 per year, and because the lady was not in a position to give the address to which the children were to be sent registration was refused.

Our representative was informed in an authoritative quarter that this refusal was made in error. The official at the registration centre should have accepted the registration, at the same time making a note that the address to which the children are to be sent would be supplied later when accommodation had been secured. This misunderstanding occurred at other centres, and it is suggested that persons who were refused registration in similar circumstances should renew their applications to-day. This can be done between the hours of 9.30 a.m. and 3.30 p.m., and between 6.30 and 9.30 p.m. According to the original plan, this is the last day for registration.

YUGOSLAVS AT BERCHTESGADEN

Hitler's Talk with Ministers

HITLER yesterday received the Yugoslav Premier and Foreign Minister at his Berchtesgaden retreat, says a Salzburg despatch, quoted in a Press Association telegram from Berlin. Ribbentrop, the German Foreign Minister, was present. "A talk on questions of common interest was conducted in the spirit of traditional friendship between the two nations," the despatch adds.

"IN GREAT RESERVE"

The Yugo-Slav delegation arrived at Salzburg by train early yesterday morning. In the afternoon they went on to Berchtesgaden, where they were received by Hitler at the Berghof at 4.30 p.m. The Fuehrer welcomed his visitors at the door, where S.S. guards were drawn up as a guard of honour. Their talk with Hitler lasted three hours, with a short break for tea.

In addition to Ribbentrop, Dr. Schmidt was present as interpreter. M. Tvetkovitch and M. Cincar Markovitch left at 7.45 p.m., and shortly afterwards began their journey back to Belgrade.

German and Yugo-Slav Radio Stations gave no indication any time yesterday, says Associated Press, that Tvetkovitch, Yugo-Slav Prime Minister, and Cincar Markovitch, his Foreign Minister, were visiting Hitler at Berchtesgaden. Radio Lyons, however, quoted the Neue Zurcher Zeitung for a statement that the "German-Yugo-Slav negotiations now in course were being conducted in great reserve." The object of the negotiations, Radio Lyons went on, was believed in Berlin to be Yugo-Slav's attitude towards the Tripartite Pact, and Yugo-Slavia's outlook on current movements in the Balkans.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

An official statement issued after the talks says:—

"The Fuehrer to-day received at the Berghof, in the presence of the Foreign Minister, Von Ribbentrop, the Yugoslav Prime Minister, M. Tvetkovitch, and Foreign Minister M. Cincar-Markovitch.

"The conversations concerned problems of mutual interest, and they took place in the spirit of the traditional relations of friendship which exist between the two nations."

BULGARIA WANTS NEUTRALITY

REPORTED TROOP MOVEMENTS

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

SOFIA, Friday.

A sensation has been caused in Sofia by the news that the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Yugoslavia had left for Germany. The event is considered as the most important since the German occupation of Rumania.

The newspaper Mir asks: "Where does Bulgaria stand to-day?" and answers: "The reply is for neutrality and the realisation of national claims peacefully. There is no change in our attitude towards our neighbours."

It is reliably reported here that there have lately been considerable movements of troops along Balkan frontiers. Several Greek divisions are stated here to have been transferred from Albania into Thrace, in case of a surprise move coming from that quarter. A large section of the Greek population of Thrace is reported to be leaving.

It is considered too early here to assess the consequences of the reported presence of German troops on the Yugoslav-Rumanian frontier, and the alleged German demand for the passage of troops through Yugoslav territory. Well-informed circles here connect the visit of the Yugoslav statesmen to Germany with the understanding implicit in the German-Soviet agreement that Germany should keep off Soviet preserves, particularly where Bulgaria is concerned.

NERVOUSNESS IN RUMANIA

In Rumania there is increasing nervousness of British bombing raids, according to travellers reaching Istanbul, and quoted in a message to the independent French Agency. They say that the roofs of hotels at Constanza, Rumania's Black Sea port, are bristling with anti-aircraft guns. Following a meeting of the Rumanian Cabinet on Thursday, says a Bucharest despatch to the German official News Agency, well-informed circles stated that a new political constitution was being worked out and would soon be published.

TURKEY PREPARED TO FIGHT

OFFICIAL PRESS STATEMENT

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

ISTANBUL, Friday.

The official Turkish Press, reflecting the views of the Government, stressed in unison to-day that Turkey was prepared to fight; "for we cannot be disinterested when a foreign army passes into Bulgaria."

These obviously inspired articles were interpreted as Turkey's answer to the Axis diplomatic campaign to obtain Ankara's promise to remain quiet in case the German armies move through Bulgaria as expected.

RUMANIAN GOODS CONTRABAND

His Majesty's Government have decided they must now regard Rumania as territory under enemy occupation as from February 15, 1941; therefore, Rumania will be regarded as an enemy destination for contraband purposes and all goods of Rumanian origin or ownership will be liable to seizure.

SPANISH-ITALIAN TALKS

NEWSPAPER COMMENT

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

ROME, Friday.

Commenting on the talks between Signor Mussolini and General Franco at Bordighera, the Giornale d'Italia writes:—"The rapid evolution of events will reveal the substance of the discussions between the chiefs of Italy and Spain. To-day it is important to emphasise the significance of the meeting between the heads of the two Latin revolutions, which is confirmed in an historic moment. The talks have shown the identity of views of the two Governments on problems of a European character, and on those which now interest the two countries. Thanks to the Falangist revolution, which had the active sympathy of Italy and Germany against the hostility of the enemies of the Axis powers, Spain is preparing again to assume in Europe one of her directive functions of which Britain had deprived her."

Tribuna writes:—"Spain has the same reasons as Italy for wishing to break the chains of hegemony imposed by Britain, who has used methods of intimidation dear to the men of London against the Spanish people."

Lavoro Fascista says:—"The social, economic and political problems of Spain are the same as Italy's, and all her problems will find their solution in the liquidation of British Demo-Plutocracy. There is a very significant community of interests between the three Totalitarian revolutions of Italy, Germany and Spain."

ROME SAYS:

PARACHUTE TROOPS LANDED IN ITALY

"ALL CAPTURED BEFORE DOING DAMAGE"

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

ALLIED parachute troops, armed with machine guns, hand grenades and explosives, have landed in Italy, according to yesterday's Italian High Command communiqué issued in Rome. The landing took place on Monday night in the Locano district of Calabria, in the "toe" of Italy, and was carried out with the object of causing damage to communications and water supplies, the communiqué asserts.

It is claimed that, thanks to the prompt intervention of Italian forces, all the parachutists were taken prisoner before they could do serious damage.

During the "round-up" a fight, in which a guard and a civilian were killed, is stated to have taken place.

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

ROME, Friday.

Further alleged details of the rounding-up of the parachute troops are given by the official Stefani Agency to-night.

"During the night of February 10-11," the agency states, "parachutists landed in the Locano district of Calabria between 10.30 p.m. and 2 a.m.

"The parachutists, who carried automatic arms and explosives, certainly intended to damage the regional water supply system, a magnificent achievement of the Fascist régime which made possible an agricultural revival throughout the district, together with railway lines, bridges and roads.

There was no official comment in London last night on the statement that parachute troops had been dropped in Southern Italy.

"Having landed in a clearing surrounded by forests, the parachutists occupied some farms and immobilised the peasants.

"One parachutist who had broken a leg was left in one of these farms, where he was later arrested by guards.

"The British parachutists deceived the peasant farmers by shouting 'Duce,' and so inducing them to open their doors to them.

"After abandoning their injured companion the British made their way to the springs which feed the irrigation system, guiding themselves by means of maps with which they were provided.

"But the alarm had been given in the region, and guards, co-operating with the military police and the military organisations of the Fascist Party, drew a cordon round the area. A search was instituted, making the position of the parachutists very precarious.

"Speedily surrounded, they were unable to execute their plans, and had to hide in the woods to avoid capture. To make capture more difficult, they divided up into several groups, hoping that some at least would be able to break through the cordon and carry out a part of their plans.

"Their plan failed; for, while eleven parachutists were seized in one place, seven others were arrested at the same time a mile or two away.

"The latter attempted to put up a resistance, turning a Tommy gun on the patrol, consisting of one guard, one police constable and a shepherd, who was guiding them over the mountain paths.

"Shots from the British officer's gun put the policeman and the shepherd out of action.

"The guard, left alone, defended himself with his rifle, forcing the parachutists to remain behind a rock until other guards, hearing the shots, came up.

"Seeing that all resistance was hopeless, the parachutists surrendered.

"Another group, which had taben to the scrubland, remained to be found. The search went on, and the rest of the parachutists, including a captain, were seized without trouble.

"All of them were clothed in khaki overalls, and had Air Force caps. They were armed with Tommy guns and automatic pistols, and were provided with Italian money.

"They have been handed over to the Regional Defence Command," the Agency concludes.—(Press Association.)

An Associated Press message from Rome last night says that no details were given when the Italian communiqué laconically reported the capture of British parachutists. The newspapers, however, the message adds, told of the capture of four British flyers, who baled out of two 'planes that crashed in the zone where the parachutists were said to have been caught.

"CO-OPERATE WITH GERMANY"

NEW FRENCH MOVEMENT'S APPEAL

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

LONDON, Friday

Broadcasting from Paris to-night, M. Eugene Deloncle, who described himself as "Chief of the Rassemblement National Populaire," appealed to Marshal Pétain to co-operate with Germany.

"M le Marechal," he said, "when you asked for and signed the Armistice, and declared at Montoire that you were ready to take the responsibility before history, you decided irrevocably the fate of this country. Make the gesture expected by all and, through you and the courageous continuation of policy, vanquished France will rise again."

After stating that "the life or death of France" depended on collaboration with Germany, Deloncle said: "If France fails to collaborate she will remain a vanquished country faced by a powerful victor, a dissatisfied victor because his ideal of European reconstruction has not been understood, and a victor rendered distrustful by our present attitude. It will be the death of France if we wait any longer. As always in the past, we have preferred a policy of temporisation and forbearing to one of action. It will, however, be the life of France if the right road is chosen, if we accept collaboration with Germany to construct the Europe of to-morrow both in the economic and in the ideological sphere."

"The French, as well as the Germans," he added, "must be shown that a policy of collaboration is more deeply rooted in our country than is thought, and that it can germinate in all social classes from the extreme Right to the extreme Left, regardless of their political past. We must first of all collaborate—then make the national revolution. The great man of July last was a venerable soldier, a glorious chief, and a virtuous and sincere patriot, who, through misfortunes was elevated to the supreme post. This great man, to render the revolution successful, must gather round himself men of action and vigour, inspired by an ardent faith, yet, endowed with a sense of reality and realising the necessity of acting quickly and remorselessly. The crime of his entourage was that they chose for him a group of men without homogeneity or cohesion. Some men were changed in the Cabinet—too few—some methods were changed—not enough. That is why the national revolution has been delayed. The Rassemblement National Populaire demands that this revolution shall take place and it will unite all those who ask for it, and who know its aims. We demand that those responsible for the defeat shall be punished. We demand, in order to make good our defeat, a strong and authoritative Government, willing to punish the traitors. The revolution must not lead to destruction and ruin, but must, above all, create a new order of things, which shall exclude Jews, Freemasons, Communists, capitalists, and all others who formed the Anglo-Saxon hegemony."

SIX SHIPS SUNK

British Convoy Attacked

Raider a Pocket Battleship

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

FUNCHAL (MADEIRA), Friday.

SIX ships in a British convoy steaming northwards between Madeira and the Azores are believed to have been sunk, following an attack by a German surface raider, apparently a pocket battleship, early yesterday morning.

Over 100 survivors from vessels which went down were landed here to-day. Four of them were taken to hospital.

The ships sunk are believed to include one of Greek registration.

The raider hurled salvoes of shells into the convoy for about half an hour and then disappeared over the horizon. All the vessels in the convoy returned her fire.

When the action was over those vessels which had not been hit dispersed and picked up survivors from those which were sunk.

The official German version of the action, as given in the German High Command communiqué yesterday, claimed that thirteen ships in the convoy were sunk, To-day's High Command communiqué increased the number of vessels sunk to fourteen, and claimed that they represented a displacement of 82,000 tons.

RAIDS ON LONDON AREA

FIRE-WATCHERS DEAL WITH INCENDIARIES

PRESS ASSOCIATION TELEGRAM.

LONDON, Friday.

An "alert" was sounded in the London area shortly after dark to-night and bombs fell in a London district shortly afterwards.

Raiders flew in from the west and were promptly attacked by gun-fire.

A second 'plane, which followed a few minutes late, dropped a high explosive bomb. Raiders were heard over another London suburb, and there also they were received with gun-fire.

After several medium-sized bombs had fallen, a heavy one crashed in one district.

Hundreds of incendiaries fell in several London districts, but organised squads of fire-watchers covered street after street and prevented fires.

Raiding 'planes were believed to be in the vicinity of towns in East Anglia, the east of England, the north-west, and the east-midlands.

British night fighters were in operation against raiders in an eastern area, and anti-aircraft guns also were in action at one time.

A British Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security communiqué to-night stated: "Enemy aircraft, flying singly, have dropped bombs at a point in north-east Scotland, and also in Kent, to-day. These caused no damage or casualties.

"During patrol activity in the Straits of Dover this morning an enemy fighter was shot down.

"One of our fighters is missing.

"Later reports show that the casualties in London last night were larger than was first supposed, and included a number of persons killed."

GERMAN-OCCUPIED PORTS ATTACKED

Flying in the teeth of a strong south-easterly wind across the Straits of Dover, Royal Air Force bombers to-night attacked the German invasion ports along the French coast. Flashes lit up the sky in the direction of Calais, and the rumble of heavy explosions was heard on the English side of the Channel.

The Royal Air Force were believed this afternoon to have carried out another daylight sweep over German bases along the French coast.

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE

NEW OUTBREAK IN DONEGAL

A further outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease has been confirmed on premises at Carrowen, Burt, Co. Donegal. The infected premises, which are situate about two miles from Baylet, Inch Island, where an outbreak occurred on the 30th ultimo, are within the area of the county already under restrictions.

The usual precautions are being taken.

DERRY HERD TO BE DESTROYED

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

DERRY, Friday.

A new case of foot-and-mouth disease confirmed at Newbuildings, in County Derry, is extremely serious. It involves the destruction of one of the largest dairy herds in the North-West of Ireland. Eighty-two head of valuable dairy stock will have to be slaughtered. The farm where this case occurred is adjacent to the farm where a case was confirmed a fortnight ago.

SUSPENSION OF SOLICITOR

ALLEGED PROFESSIONAL MISCONDUCT

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE'S COMMENT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

JOHN LYNN, solicitor, of Ship Quay street, Derry, aged 26, was suspended for two years by the Lord Chief Justice, in the King's Bench Division, Belfast, to-day, after the hearing of reports, in which professional misconduct was alleged by the Discipline Committee of the Incorporated Law Society

His Lordship, describing the charges as serious, imposed the punishment on each of two cases, but directed that it run concurrently. He also ordered that Mr. Lynn should pay the costs of the proceedings.

Mr. J. D. Chambers, K.C. (instructed by Mr. R. A. Rutherford) appeared for the Discipline Committee, and Mr. Charles Stewart for respondent.

Mr. Chambers said that the first complaint was in relation to a contemplated action by Matthew Patterson, of Ballyheather, Burndennett, Co. Tyrone, who was a lorry driver. Patterson met with an accident on December 25th, 1938, and put the matter in respondent's hands. Respondent negotiated with the insurance company, and, as Patterson was not in Derry frequently, he authorised a Mr. Todd Robinson to carry on negotiations on his behalf through respondent. Subsequently respondent came to Belfast and accepted an offer of £12 10s., and when the cheque came through it was addressed to Patterson.

Continuing, counsel said that respondent himself, or through one of his clerks, caused the cheque to be endorsed with a colourable imitation of the signature or endorsement of Patterson. Respondent received £12 10s. on foot of the cheque, and also received from the insurance company a fee of two guineas. He then made out a cheque for £10 in Patterson's favour, deducting a further sum of £2 10s., but that cheque was dishonoured

Answering His Lordship as to whether there was any justification for the signature being put on the cheque made out in Patterson's name, Mr. Chambers said respondent contended that he had received from Patterson a general authority which enabled him to do so. He (counsel) could not put that construction upon the terms of the authority respondent had received.

Proceeding, counsel read the finding of the Discipline Committee, and said that the Committee were of opinion that respondent was guilty of professional misconduct. The Committee felt that the case could not be met by a fine, which they had power to impose, and that the matter should be referred to his lordship.

SECOND REPORT

Mr. Chambers said that a second report related to Patrick Clifford, Glasgow terrace, Londonderry, who, in the course of his employment, alleged he received damage to his heart. Clifford instructed respondent on September 5, 1938, and later deposited with him £42 5s., which he had received as a gratuity from his employers. Clifford got £10 out of the sum, and a second cheque for £10 was also met. A later cheque for £5 was dishonoured, and when Clifford informed respondent he received another cheque for £5, which was also dishonoured, despite the fact that respondent had £22 5s. belonging to him. On returning the second cheque he got £2 10s in cash. Clifford became dissatisfied, and went to another solicitor, who told him to find out the date on which the case was to be heard. Respondent could not tell him, and he demanded his papers, respondent refusing to give them up. However, on February 20, 1940, the papers were handed over.

Proceedings were instituted against respondent to recover the balance of Clifford's money—£19 15s., and a decree was given for that amount. Counsel understood that those proceedings were not defended. It was found necessary to levy execution on foot of the decree, and the sheriff returned "no goods."

Mr. Chambers said that the committee were also of opinion in this case that respondent's conduct was unprofessional. The Law Society did not wish to exact the last pound of flesh.

Mr. Stewart said that he did not go so far as to say that the findings of the committee were not justified, but he wished to point out that there had been some meeting of the gravity of the charges. The respondent considered he was acting within his rights in signing Patterson's cheque.

In regard to the dishonouring of the cheques, respondent thought that lodgments had been made by his clerk and that there were sufficient funds in the bank. Anything of an unsavoury nature which took place in the dishonouring of the cheques arose through financial embarrassment. Respondent had not the two accounts which it was now necessary to have.

Counsel appealed for leniency.

His Lordship ruled as stated, saying that the case could not be met merely by censure.

NO CUSTOMS DUTY ON VEHICLES

HARNESS AND SADDLERY ALSO FREE

An order made by the Government yesterday under the Emergency Powers Act, suspends as from to-day the Customs duties on animal-drawn vehicles and on harness and saddlery.

It is understood that this order is due to the increased demand for horse-drawn traction in view of the lack of petrol for motor vehicles. The removal of the duties will facilitate the import of new or second-hand articles.

HARDSHIPS OF PROPERTY OWNERS

At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Irish Property Owners' and Ratepayers' Association, Ltd., at which Sir Valentine Grace, Bart., presided, it was decided to make representations to the Government regarding the hardships suffered by property owners on account of the Rent Restrictions Act. Dissatisfaction was expressed at the delay in publishing the report of the Town Tenants (Occupational) Tenancies Tribunal, in view of the fact that the taking of evidence was completed years ago.

Keats's bubbling sense of humour is reflected in the following anecdote which the poet insisted on relating time out of number to the wretched Chapman, whose countenance had long since acquired the permanent look of suffering usually associated with music hall violinists.

"It is not generally known," he would say, "that Alexander the Great was allergic to eggs. He forbade the humble ovoid to all his men, and declared he would execute any person he found eating an egg or possessing one. Nevertheless, there was much secret egg-eating in his camp. One night, in making his rounds of the barracks, the king very nearly surprised a group of officers who were seated round the canteen fire in flagrante delicto. They were saved only by the presence of mind of a lance-corporal, who managed to warn his comrades and greet the king with the single inspired cry—

D.U.T. COMPANY'S NEW GARAGE

LAST WORD IN COMFORT AND EFFICIENCY

The new garage of the Dublin United Tramways Company, at Ringsend road, Dublin, which is said to be the most modern of its kind in Ireland, or in England, will be in operation this week-end.

The garage has covered accommodation for 100 omnibuses, while thirty more can be kept in the concreted yard attached. Every vehicle on entering passes through the yard and into the garage by way of three "bays." Here vehicles are re-fuelled from the 40,000-gallon underground storage tanks by pumps, which deliver 20 gallons a minute, and is washed with the aid of two washing machines, each fitted with four hoses, pumping water at 380lb. pressure.

Every bus is examined closely every day, and six pits are provided for inspection and repair purposes. Each pit is fitted for the use of compressed-air apparatus for inflating tyres, or injecting lubricants and grease, and also for low-voltage lighting by portable lamps. All the concrete used in the garage is reinforced, and beside the "pits" are sunken air-raid shelters. On the same level as the floor of the "pits" is a "sunken" workshop, which enables the mechanics to carry out their duties without having to climb steps.

The most interesting features of the new building, however, are the arrangements made for the comfort of the staff. There are bright, cheery rooms, where the mechanics can change into their working clothes; specially-designed desks, where conductors can count their "takings," and a well-fitted canteen, where seventy workers can be accommodated at the same time, and where meals can be obtained at the lowest charges. There is also a well-equipped first-aid room.

JAPAN'S POTENTIALITY

POSSIBLE CONSEQUENCES OF INTERVENTION

FROM OUR MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.

QUITE recently there have been a number of straws tending to show the possible direction of the Japanese wind—the typhoon, as we might call it. There was Colonel Knox's "No more destroyers at present," and there was the Australian Vice-Premier's pointed warning—to say nothing of all sorts of news rumours, whether inspired or otherwise. And, certainly, if Japan should enter the war on the Axis side, it would be more far-reaching than, say, a German advance into Bulgaria. The possibility is sufficiently real to be worth examining—from the three-fold aspect of its possible effect: (a) on current operations; (b) on future British war-action; (c) on the United States. We shall take them in that order.

At the moment the material war-issue is the fate of Italy as a belligerent. As far as Britain's part is concerned, this is a matter of eliminating Italian armed forces from the African Continent. Now this is being done, in the main, by troops drawn from regions directly concerned by any military action of Japan—Australia, India, New Zealand, to wit. It is very probable that a Japanese declaration of war would stop the flow of reinforcements from these countries—at least for a time. It may be that those already in situ are sufficient for the work in hand: we have not the requisite data to pronounce on this.

MEDITERRANEAN FLEET

The greatest benefit which Britain could derive from a complete defeat of Italy would be the freeing of her fleet—at present tied to the Mediterranean. But the entry of Japan would, certainly, not allow of this fleet being brought into the Atlantic; it might even result in its being drawn still further away. This will be made clearer when we come to consider the American aspect of the problem. Also the Dutch warships at present co-operating in British waters would conceivably be called upon for the defence of the Dutch East Indies—at least to some extent.

As regards land and air forces, it is unlikely that Britain would require to send to the Far East any units that could usefully be employed elsewhere. Despite its high fighting value, the Japanese Army is—to make a "bull"—of "East European" type. In other words, its quota of planes and armoured material, etc., is far below the German standard. Also its capacity for expansion in this respect would be definitely limited—even under the most favourable conditions. It would, consequently, be less a matter of sending out troops than of not being able to count on formerly expected reinforcements from India and the Antipodes for employment in the Mediterranean. This, of course, would react unfavourably on Britain's ability to help Turkey in resisting a German advance across Asia Minor. But any such eventuality would not be immediate in any sense.

AMERICAN AID

President Roosevelt has said that American aid for Britain would not be curtailed, should the U.S.A. become embroiled. This is quite understandable, seeing that American aid is taking the form of material, and that material is far less important against Japan than it is against Germany. In this connection it may be pointed out that the destroyers withheld are not "material," in the strict sense: they are "units."

There is, however, one respect in which the U.S.A. could weightily aid Britain—and in which it is doubtful whether she will do so. If Japan prepares to attack British or Dutch territories by sea, the proper base from which to defend them is Singapore, and the most effective way to use Singapore is to base the American Pacific Fleet on that harbour—thereby setting free the British Fleet for more effective employment in European waters. The question is whether American opinion will "stand for" this most effective way of utilising their battle-fleet? Or will the public opinion in question insist on having the fleet at Hawaii—i.e., directly interposed between Japan and San Francisco on the Panama Canal?

JAPAN'S ARMY AND NAVY

Actually, of course, the fleet at Singapore would cover the purely American interests quite as well. The Japanese will send nothing eastward that would so weaken them as to enable the Americans from Singapore to help to re-conquer China. It must be realised that Japan does not enter the present war—if she comes in atall—as a fresh combatant. On the contrary, she has had nearly four years of thoroughly disheartening and inconclusive war in China. Indeed, there seems to be no end whatever to the Chinese war. Japan fought it badly—not tactically badly, but on wrong lines. She would have done much better to have used her army less and her navy more. In point of fact, it is only the Navy that could at the present time be regarded as really fresh.

Such, then, would appear to be, in a very broad outline, the possible consequences of Japanese intervention at the present time. There is one other possibility. Russia, the so-called "great enigma," would, in actual fact, become genuinely enigmatic at last. In other words—finding Japan definitely engaged in two wars—Russia might consider the advisability of chancing the third. Only anything might happen to the Ukraine in that case!

IRISH NEWS IN BRIEF

Fine for Keeping Poteen.—Daniel Sullivan, farmer, of Gortloughra, Kealkil, was summoned at Bantry Court for keeping and concealing poteen. District Justice Crotty imposed a fine of £200, mitigated to £6.

Distributive Workers and Clerks.—Mr. T. O'Gorman, Secretary, in his annual report, which was adopted at last night's meeting of the Cork Branch, Irish Union of Distributive Workers and Clerks, stated that during the year a 7½ per cent. increase in wages was negotiated with the retail and wholesale drapery trade. Increases were also secured in the drapery and allied trades' section, the chemists' section, insurance section, retail boot trade, and tailoring establishments. The branch's income for the year was £2,405, and expenditure £491, while £1,935 was remitted to the central fund. They enrolled 149 new members, and lost, through all causes, 153, leaving the membership at 1,726.

Cork Incorporated Chamber of Commerce and Shipping.—Mr. Dominick Leo Daly has been elected President of the Cork Incorporated Chamber of Commerce and Shipping, in succession to Mr. G. F. Brewitt, who has been President of the Chamber for the past two years. Mr. John J. Horgan, who proposed Mr. Daly, said the Council was sorry that Mr. T. P. Dowdall, owing to his many public duties and private commitments, was unable to accept the presidency for 1941. Mr. Daly's father was President of the Chamber in 1903 and 1909. Mr. Alfred W. Jacob was elected Vice-President. Mr. G. F. Brewitt was thanked by Mr. E. H. Harte and Mr. J. C. Rohan for his work on behalf of the Chamber during his term of office.

Newry Rates Protest.—The Newry Board of Guardians has adopted a resolution pointing out to the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland the impossible position in which the ratepayers of that area find themselves through the burden of rates, imposed through circumstances over which they have no control. Mr. T Martin, who moved the resolution, stated that they were being slowly strangled by administration which made the Board pay money that should be paid out of the Unemployment Fund. He thought that they should get an amount to meet the additional expenditure—an increase of 3s. in the £ on the rates, due solely to the payment of outdoor relief—from that fund. The Chairman, Mr. J. Reid, J.P., said that it was pointed out at the Armagh County Council that Boards of Guardians were being turned into Public Assistance Boards by the Labour Exchanges, due to bad legislation introduced by the Government.

ROAD TRANSPORT CASE

ALLEGED CARRYING GOODS WITHOUT LICENCE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NEWCASTLEWEST, Friday.

At Newcastlewest District Court to-day, Mount-Collins Co-operative Dairy Society was summoned, under Section 9 of the Road Transport Act, for carrying goods for reward without having a merchandise carriers' licence.

Guard Rowsome stated that on December 17, at Newcastlewest, he found 22 pigs in a lorry, the property of the Society. The driver produced a note-book to him, giving the names of owners of the pigs, and said that they were the property of the creamery. The driver did not give him a satisfactory answer when he asked him why pigs were marked differently while owners' names corresponded in the book.

Mr. Francis Moran, manager of the creamery, in reply to Mr. M. J. Woulfe, solicitor for the Society, produced an account book showing the purchase of the pigs by the Society for £123 4s. 7d., and also a record of the sale of the pigs to Messrs. O'Mara, of Limerick.

In cross-examination by Superintendent Mulcahy, he said that the Society was not acting as agents for Messrs. O'Mara.

Mr. Woulfe said that the case was vital to the producers of the district.

DUBLIN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The A.R.P. Committee of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce have placed a large scale map of the City of Dublin in the Chamber. This map indicates the position of control rooms, message centres, fire appliance depots, and wardens' posts, etc. It is suggested that members of the Chamber should inspect this map forthwith, and come to arrangement regarding the formation of fire watchers to protect their property.

Classes for practical instruction in fighting fires have been formed, and commence on Tuesday next, the 18th February, at the Fire Brigade centres.

WHY ORANGES ARE DEAR

THE arrival of a cargo of six million oranges in Dublin raised prospects in the minds of the man in the street, and especially of the housewife, of oranges not only being available, but available at a reasonable price. Early in the week the price of the fruit in such shops as had stocks was sixpence or sevenpence per orange. It was hoped that with the fresh arrivals the price would fall at least fifty per cent., but in practice that has not been the case.

In the hope of eliciting some explanation of the high prices still maintained, an Irish Times representative sought the views of some leading retail merchants.

Mr. G. D. Findlater, of the firm of Messrs. A. Findlater and Co., pointed out that oranges were a perishable commodity. The oranges which arrived recently have, he said, been a long time in transit. These cargoes do not come as quickly as in peace times. If you buy a case of, say, 20 dozen you may only get about 15 dozen saleable oranges—that is, you would have a loss of from 25 to 30 per cent., and, of course, in the sale of the others the cost has to be covered. Even after the fruit has been sold in the market there is delay before the retailer gets the fruit to hand for sale in his shop, and the fruit is inclined to deteriorate quickly.

As to the statement that oranges from the recently-arrived cargo could be sold on the streets at twopence or threepence each, Mr. Findlater was of the opinion that these would be very small oranges, which would run to about 500 in a package. That class of orange, he thought, was mostly sold to street traders and small shops.

Mr. Findlater also drew attention to the fact that the oranges which arrived were mostly sweet or dinner oranges, and not the bitter or marmalade orange. Some marmalade oranges did arrive, but these had been distributed to the jam manufacturers. He thought that was the right thing to do, as it helped the manufacturers to give employment.

BUYERS LOST THEIR HEADS

An illuminating explanation of the position was given by Mr. J. P. Knowles, head of Messrs. Knowles and Son, the well-known fruit retailers. When a boat's cargo was sold on Monday there was hardly an orange to be had in the City of Dublin. A room full of excited buyers went off their heads and paid silly prices for the oranges. However, although the market was bare over the week-end, it was not left dependent solely on this cargo, because on the following morning another steamer arrived, with over a thousand cases of Californian oranges. Even the people who had ordered these oranges on the Californian boat did not know she was arriving so soon, and they paid high prices like the others for the Spanish oranges.

Spanish oranges were on sale, said Mr. Knowles, at prices ranging from 2s. 9d. to 5s. a dozen, according to size and quality. He had no doubt that cheaper oranges could be got.

As an instance of how prices soared, Mr. Knowles said that the 48 cases of Valencia oranges, which were not part of the consignment of 2,500, were sold at from £5 to £7 15s. per case, although their price normally would have been about 40s. a case. These cases cost about 22s. f.o.b. in Spain.

BUILDING CONTRACTOR SENT TO PRISON

COUNTY WICKLOW FIRE CLAIM

John J. Doyle, building contractor, Harold's Cross, Dublin, who was convicted in the Central Criminal Court last Wednesday of having attempted to obtain from the Commercial Union Assurance Co., Ltd., sums of £300 and £800 by falsely pretending that furniture, household effects, building materials and house fittings had been destroyed or damaged by fire at Scurlock's Leap, Manor Kilbride, Co. Wicklow, was sentenced to seven months' imprisonment.

Mr. Justice Maguire said that but for the good character given Doyle by Inspector P. J. Bermingham, Civic Guard, and his previous good record, he would have imposed a severe sentence.

BRAY DISTRICT COURT

CHARGES OF LARCENY

(BEFORE MR. LIAM PRICE.)

Mathew P. Lyons (31), married, said to be a native of Gorey, County Wexford, was charged with a series of offences of larceny.

Detective-Sergeant J. Kelly said that when he arrested Lyons at Kilpedder on 8th February Lyons said that he was at present at Ballykinlar, County Down. He had been on a visit to his wife and children at Gorey and admitted the charges.

Lyons said that he had been in continuous trouble from the age of 14. He had returned to Gorey to bring his wife and family to Northern Ireland. He got a drop of drink and did not know what he was doing.

On Lyons's undertaking to go to Northern Ireland, a suspensory sentence of six months was imposed—not to be enforced if he kept his undertaking.

OBITUARY

MAUD LADY CLANMORRIS

Maud Lady Clanmorris, who died yesterday at her residence, Bangor Castle, Co. Down, aged 82, had been in failing health for the past two years. She was the only child and heiress of the late Robert E. Ward, D.L., of Bangor Castle, and it was through him that she inherited the Bangor Estate. Her grandfather, Michael Edward Ward, Minister Plenipotentiary at Dresden, married Lady Matilda Stewart, daughter of the first Marquess of Londonderry, and sister of the famous Viscount Castlereagh. Her husband, who was the fifth Baron, died in 1916. There were five sons and two daughters of the marriage, and all the sons served in the Great War. Lady Clanmorris was a benefactress of Bangor, taking a deep interest in its social, charitable and philanthropic life. She was an accomplished musician, and was deeply interested in the musical life of the borough.

MR. JOHN FREDERICK OGILVY

The death occurred on Thursday last at 21 Lower Baggot street, Dublin, of Mr. John Frederick Ogilvy, aged 73. Mr. Ogilvy was a Bachelor of Arts of Trinity College, Dublin, and had practised as a barrister for many years in Dublin. He was a son of the late Alexander Ogilvy, of Grafton street, and in 1899 went to South Africa to take part in the Boer War as a member of the South Irish Horse—or Lord Longford's Horse, as it was known. He was wounded in action, but returned to become a well-known member of the Dublin Bar. He was also a prominent member of the University Club. For some years he had ceased to practise law.

NEW JAPANESE ENVOY TO U.S.

BETTER UNDERSTANDING DESIRED

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

WASHINGTON, Friday.

President Roosevelt, receiving the new Japanese Ambassador to Washington, Admiral Nomura, to-day welcomed the Admiral's assurance that he is resolved to "achieve a better understanding" and thereby to preserve "the peace of the Pacific."

The President noted, it is stated, the serious strain in Japanese-American relations.

Admiral Nomura was presenting his credentials to President Roosevelt. He was accompanied to the White House by Mr. Cordell Hull, the United States Secretary of State.

During the interview Admiral Nomura referred to "recent developments" in Japanese-American relations, which had unfortunately been the cause of considerable concern on both sides of the ocean.

PEACE IN THE PACIFIC

"It is necessary now more than ever," he added, "to bring about a better understanding of each other's position, in order to secure the interests and well-being of our two nations, thereby preserving peace in the Pacific and maintaining the traditional friendship between us."

He expressed the hope that he would have the President's co-operation in this aim.

President Roosevelt, in his reply, agreed that there were developments in relations between the United States and Japan "which cause concern."

"I welcome your assurance," he added, "that, in the interests of the traditional friendship between the two countries and of the well-being between the American and Japanese peoples, you are resolved to do all you can to bring about a better understanding."

UNITED STATES SENATE

"CLOSED SESSION" URGED

Yesterday the Republican, Senator Wiley, of Wisconsin, suggested that the United States Senate hold a "closed Executive session" next week to receive from Mr. Hull and his assistants "a report on world conditions."

Senator Wiley declared that there should be a "realistic appraisal of our whole American-British relations" in connection with the debate on the Aid Britain Bill.—(Associated Press.)

U.S. CITIZENS IN FAR EAST

PREVIOUS WARNINGS REPEATED

Asked whether the new warning to Americans to leave the Far East was merely a routine repetition or the result of increased gravity in the situation in the Pacific, President Roosevelt, at his Press Conference yesterday, according to a Press Association telegram from Washington, said it was a repetition of previous warnings. He advised his questioner to refer to the State Department before using such adjectives as "increased gravity."

Americans in Peiping, it was stated there yesterday, received no Consular circular about evacuation, but were asked to call at the Embassy building, where they will offer a warning similar to that issued to United States citizens at Shanghai and elsewhere. The number of Americans still in Peiping is about 470, excluding the Marine Embassy guard, while there are some 270 British subjects in the city.

DUTCH EAST INDIES

The Consul-General of the United States in Batavia yesterday denied that he had advised American citizens to leave the Netherlands East Indies, a telegram from Batavia stated. He said that he had not received any instructions to this effect from Washington. The instructions issued yester

NO GUILTY INTENT

TRIAL OF MARINE OFFICERS STOPPED

JUDGE'S TRIBUTE TO THEIR BRAVERY

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE M. MAGUIRE.)

ON the suggestion of the jury, in the Central Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, the trial was stopped in which three officers of the Irish Marine Service—William J. Hollingsworth, Patrick J. Meskel and Thomas P. Barry, of the Fort Rannoch, were charged with conspiracy to commit larceny, and with having stolen articles valued at about £1,000 from the Yugoslav ship, Cetvrti, belonging to the master and members of the crew.

When the case for the prosecution concluded, Mr. J. M. FitzGerald, K.C., who, with Mr. F. D. McCarthy Morrogh (instructed by Mr. B. M. O'Meara, Cork), defended, said that he intended to apply for a direction, but asked that Commandant Shaw, Commanding Officer Ordnance, Collins Barracks, Cork, and Captain Leahy, Collins Barracks, Cork, be called to give evidence.

Commandant Shaw said that while on board the Fort Rannoch, at the Blasket Islands he heard Lieutenant Hollingsworth telling the men to put some stuff removed from the Cetvrti in the boatswain's stores. While sitting in the Fort Rannoch on the following day he heard Lieutenant Hollingsworth ask Officer Cotter if cigarettes had been brought on board from the Yugoslav vessel. Cotter replied that there had been and that they had been given to the men. Lieutenant Hollingsworth was very annoyed and ordered the cigarettes to be collected immediately and brought to him, saying that they were State property and should be kept under his control. The cigarettes were parcelled up, and the lieutenant took them away with him.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SEARCH VESSEL

Captain Leahy, officer commanding the sub-dépôt of the Marine and Coast-Watching Service, said that when he arrived on the ship he told Lieutenant Hollingsworth that he had instructions to search the vessel, as a complaint had been made that certain articles had been removed from the Cetvrti to the Fort Rannoch. He immediately said: "Yes; we have articles on board here, and they are quite safe." Superintendent O'Shea and Captain Corrigan were present when Lieutenant Hollingsworth said that they would be willing to return the stuff to the Cetvrti when she would be safely anchored. Superintendent O'Shea, Captain Corrigan and himself had a consultation after Lieutenant Hollingsworth was told that the matter would have to be reported. He (witness) could not see any reason for reporting it, and said that it was a pity that the thing arose. Subsequently witness was informed that Colonel Costello had given instructions that all the officers were to be placed under arrest, and that witness was to remain on board. Witness refused to carry out that order, and said to Captain Corrigan that it was too serious a matter. Witness called Colonel Costello on the telephone, and when he returned to the boat Superintendent O'Shea went to Valencia, and Captain Corrigan and he went aboard the Cetvrti. When Meskel and Barry were told that the Fort Rannoch was under arrest they were "absolutely upside down." They were indignant, and could not understand why. Lieutenant Meskel thought the whole thing was a joke.

ABSOLUTELY BONA-FIDE

Mr. Justice Maguire—From your investigation, were these men acting bona-fide in the whole matter?

Witness—Absolutely, my lord.

Did you find any of this property on their persons at all?—No.

Had you any evidence of any attempt being made to dispose of the property?—None whatever.

Or to put it to their own use?—No; except in the case of the cigarettes, and I can quite understand that.

Mr. Fitzgerald then asked for a direction, and said that, if necessary, he would call the accused men, although he thought it was only waste of time.

Mr. M. J. Connolly, K.C., who, with Mr. T. J. Donovan (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor), prosecuted, said that in view of the complaints made, the facts had been placed before the court, and the State was only anxious that justice should be done.

When asked by the Judge if the jury had anything to say, the foreman said: "We find the accused not guilty."

MERELY A MISTAKE

Mr. Justice Maguire said that the jury could make a recommendation, and he could act on it. He was satisfied that there was not sufficient evidence to submit to the jury, and any guilty intent to steal the property or to take it with the intention of personally depriving the owners of it. The circumstances had been fully examined, and it was clear that if anything irregular had happened it was merely a mistake, and certainly would not be taken in the light that it was a crime. The officers had behaved with great bravery in saving that valuable ship, which, even in Valencia Harbour, was subject to the grave perils of the sea. It was only through fine seamanship it had been saved at all. In the circumstances he would not be justified in allowing the case to go to the jury, and he was glad that the jury had volunteered a suggestion that the case should be stopped. He directed that the three accused men be discharged.

The men stood to attention and saluted before leaving the dock.

Earlier in the proceedings Superintendent O'Shea said that Lieut. Hollingsworth had strongly objected to allowing the Yugoslav crew aboard the Cetvrti to compile a list of property, as that would impair a claim for salvage. On December 19 Lieut. Barry had given him a copy of a report he had made to the offer commanding the Fort Rannoch. The report stated that on December 4, with members of the crew of the Fort Rannoch, Lieut. Barry boarded the Cetvrti at the orders of their commanding officer. They struck the Yugoslav ensign and hoisted the tricolour with due ceremony. There were four inches of water in the engine room, and the indications were that the vessel had been abandoned with full fires burning and with a dangerous insufficiency of water in the boilers. The towing rope had given away three times when steam was raised in the Cetvrti, and she proceeded under her own power. Subsequently a gale came on, and, with every indication of a worsening of the weather, Lieut. Hollingsworth, O.C., ordered the ship's papers and valuable equipment to be transferred to the Fort Rannoch before the latter vessel went to a safe anchorage. He had transferred articles which he thought a pity should be lost in the coming night.

The report gave further evidence of the difficulties they met with in bringing the Cetvrti to a safe anchorage.

MESSRS. CLERY'S CASE

ORDER FOR DISCOVERY

(BEFORE THE MASTER OF THE HIGH COURT.)

In the action of Messrs. Clery and Co., Ltd., Lower O'Connell street, Dublin, against Eustace John Shott, chartered accountant, 39 Dame street, Dublin, and Denis Guiney, draper, 79 Talbot street, Dublin, an application was made on behalf of Mr. Guiney for an order for discovery of documents by the plaintiffs.

The Master directed that discovery should be made by each party to the other, and remarked that he did not think that there could be a trial of the action until next term.

Mr. T. G. Marnan (instructed by Messrs. E. and G. Stapleton) appeared for Messrs. Clery; Mr. T. V. Davy (instructed by Messrs. J. L. Burke and Co.) for Mr. Guiney; and Mr. Vaughan Wilson (instructed by Messrs. Whitney, Moore and Keller) appeared for Mr. Shott.

CORK FARMER AND COURT ORDER

AN ORDER FOR COMMITTAL

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

An order was made committing John Carver, farmer, Inchnagree, Doneraile, County Cork, to prison for failing to obey an order of the Court directing him to pay alimony at the rate of 25s. a week to his wife, Mary Carver, Gormlee, Carrignavar, County Cork, pending the hearing of her action for divorce on the ground of cruelty, which, it was stated, had been granted last July.

Mr. W. O'B. FitzGerald instructed by Mr. John K. Coakley), who appeared for Mrs. Carver, said that when Mrs. Carver's petition was granted in July last the arrears amounted to £52 5s.

An unusual feature of the case is that another man already has been returned for trial on the same charge—namely, the manslaughter of Josie Cotter, by knocking her down with a car at Dishop's Island, Watergrasshill, County Cork, in November last.

Mr. D. Casey, State Solicitor, who prosecuted, told the court that this was the case in which Patrick Curley was charged with manslaughter, and in which depositions were taken before the justice. Curley was returned for trial on his own statement, that he was the driver of the car with which the unfortunate little child was killed at Watergrasshill. After informations were received, summary charges under the Road Traffic Act were proceeded with against the accused man, Curley, and when he came up as a witness, he swore that he was not driving the car at all at the time of the accident, but that it was then being driven by the present accused man, Anthony Conway.

On this evidence, he said, the Justice directed the issue of a bench warrant for the arrest of Conway on a charge of manslaughter, and adjourned the summary cases pending the result of the criminal proceedings. Now they came before him on the manslaughter charge against Conway. The depositions in the present case would be more or less a repetition of those already taken in the case against Patrick Curley.

Among to-day's witnesses was Patrick Curley, who admitted having stated that he was the driver, but now said that he had made that statement at Conway's request. He now declared that Conway was the driver.

The further hearing was adjourned.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

SINGULAR DEVELOPMENT IN CORK CASE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

CORK, Friday.

Arising out of the death of a school-girl, who sustained fatal injuries when, on her way to school with some companions, she was knocked down by a motor car, a charge of manslaughter was brought against Anthony Conway, Convent View, Tallow, County Waterford, at a special court in Cork to-day.

Fatal 'Bus Accident.—Harry Byford, a young man, of 13 Romans street, Cork, received fatal injuries when he was knocked down by a 'bus at South Terrace, Cork, last night. He was dead on admission to the South Infirmary.

Red Cross Horses Engaged at Leopardstown

Frequent trains from Harcourt street.

THE shortage of petrol need not cause any inconvenience to visitors to Leopardstown this afternoon, as there will be a frequent train service from Harcourt Street Station to the course. The Ranelagh Handicap Steeplechase will be a particularly interesting race in view of the fact that twelve of the fourteen runners hold engagements in the Red Cross Steeplechase, the weights for which have now been published. Workman's reappearance will add considerably to the attractiveness of the race. Swindon Glory, who has not run since finishing second to The Gripper in the last Red Cross Steeplechase, is bound to be a strong contender, and Yeoman, despite a 7lb. penalty, also should make a bold bid, if this be the race chosen for him.

Yeoman is declared also for the Sandyford Steeplechase, but likely will run for the longer distance race. West Point here appears to hold an outstanding chance, as his Baldoyle race should have brought him on a lot. The unlucky Sunny Tol at last may succeed in getting his head in front in the Stand Maiden Hurdle, in which Avion also should run well. Selections:—

Stand Hurdle—Sunny Tol.
Scalp Hurdle—Baybush.
Milltown Steeplechase—Golden View II.
Sandyford Steeplechase—West Point.
Ranelagh Steeplechase—Swindon Glory.

RED CROSS 'CHASE WEIGHTS

THE weights for the Red Cross Steeplechase, to be run at Leopardstown on Saturday, March 8, were issued yesterday. Top weight has been allotted to Bel et Bon, who showed useful form in England, but so far has not run in a steeplechase in this country. Jack Chaucer, winner of the first Red Cross Steeplechase, twelve months ago, when carrying 10st. 6lb., has now to carry practically 2st. more, and Knockadroleen, third in that race with 10st. 2lb., has to shoulder 12st. 6lb. The weights are:—

RED CROSS HANDICAP STEEPLECHASE, of 1,000 sovs. The winner will receive 75 per cent., second 15 per cent. and third 10 per cent. of the stakes. An open handicap steeplechase. The highest weight shall not be more than 12st. 7lb. and the lowest not less than 10st. A winner after February 14th of a steeplechase value 75 sovs 2lb. extra, of a steeplechase value 150 sovs, 4lb. extra. No penalties for steeplechases of a less distance than three miles. Horses originally handicapped at 12st. or over to carry only half penalty, and no penalty to increase a horse's weight to more than 12st. 7lb.

Four miles and about 250 yards.

Lenihan Beats McGouran in Splendid Fight

THERE was a packed house at the Stadium last night, and they saw one top-class bout between W. Lenihan and J. McGouran, but the main attraction, Ernie Smith against E. Chandler, was disappointing. Despite his cleverness in avoiding punishment, Smith is far too slow nowadays, and, having sustained a cut on the cheek in the fifth round, the referee stopped it in Chandler's favour. Despite his reputation as a knock-out expert, Chandler seemed to be mesmerised by his opponent at times, and although given endless opportunities to end it quickly he could not land the decisive blow with his right. Still, he was well in front on points when it was stopped.

Although he defeated McGouran for the second time this season, W. Lenihan had a very hard job in doing so on this occasion, and it was only his exceptional stamina that decided it. McGouran's attack by swings was effective at times, and he landed some heavy punches to the face, but Lenihan's straighter punching was the more effective, and in the last two rounds the latter was clearly on top, but it was a grand bout all the way.

Corporal Dowdall is, undoubtedly, developing hi-punching power, and after putting T. Kavanagh down in the first round with a right swing to the jaw he had him groggy again at the close of the third. Kavanagh has remarkable ability in recovering from severe punishment, and great game ness, but he was outclassed, and it certainly seems as if he is being asked to do far too much lately. The fact that he made an astonishing rally in the last two rounds makes no difference to the important point that a fight like last night's can only do him harm. He certainly has, however, the most wonderful fighting spirit.

The Delahunt-Gaffney feather-weight bout, which should have been one of the best of the night, ended in an unlucky way before it had properly started. After only a few seconds of the first round Gaffney's shoulder caught Delahunt low, and the Sandymount man was disqualified, his opponent having to be carried from the ring. It was a most unlucky accident.

THE RESULTS

Fly-Weight—A. Bigger (Phœnix) beat C. Farrell (Unity) on points.

Bantam-Weight—W. Lenihan (Arbour Hill) beat J. McGouran (Unity) on points.

Feather-Weight—A. Delahunt (Unity) beat J. Gaffney (Sandymount), disqualified in the first round; T. Redmond (Unity) beat P. Babster (Phœnix) on points.

Light-Weight—J. Kilcullen (Corinthians) beat J. McAvee (Sligo), stopped in the third round; Corporal P. Dowdall (Islandbridge) beat T. Kavanagh (Scouts) on points; E. Chandler (Corinthians) beat F. Smith (Garda), stopped in the fifth round.

Middle Weight—Corporal Ryan (Islandbridge) beat M. McKeever (Phœnix) on points; Constable W. Gallacher (R.U.C.) beat R. Sullivan (Corinthians) on points; T. Davis (Corinthians) beat E. Mulligan (Phœnix), retired injured in the third round.

Cruiser Weight—Garda P. Gallagher beat D. Fox (Unity) on points.

Heavy-Weight—Constable J. McMullan (R.U.C.) beat Corporal J. Kerry (Collins) on points.

Hockey

Leinster's Chance of Beating Ulster

The Leinster-Ulster match to-day promises to provide a good display of hockey, unless the ground at Londonbridge Road is too heavy. Leinster's defence should be strengthened by the return to that year's full-back partnership of Stevenson and Donald, and, even though Sanderson has had to call-off owing to the Leinster Section final of the Irish Cup, Browne has had experience of left-half in the Leinster line, and together with Pilkington and Butler should form a middle line capable of checking the Ulster forwards as well as supporting their own attack. With McDonough at inside-right, and D. McGilligan in the centre, Leinster should have more thrust near goal than was the case at Limerick.

Ulster's main strength lies in defence, where Carroll, Carlisle and McCready are probably the soundest trio in the country. Paul is the star of the half-back line, which may not be up to Leinster's standard, and Bowden and Smyth will be the chief dangers in what is likely to be a fast forward line. A Leinster victory may be achieved this time, provided the forwards reach expectations.

At Claremont road Y.M.C.A. entertain Pembroke Wanderers in the Leinster final of the Irish Senior Cup, and, as sides appear to be fairly matched, Wanderers, however, have had a brilliant run since mid-December, and appear to hold a stronger hand in attack, so they are fancied to represent Leinster in the later stages of the competition.

RAILWAY BEAT QUEEN'S

RAILWAY UNION 3 QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY 0

Leading by two goals to nil at the half-way stage, Railway Union had to thank some brilliant work by their goalkeeper, W. Kennedy, for their 3-nil victory over Queen's University on the second ground at Claremont road yesterday.

Lonergan scored in the first minute, and K. Tanham got the second midway through the first half. Queen's had much the better of the play after the interval, but near the end, when the entire Queen's team was up in attack, a long clearance gave J. Tanham a clear run for goal, and he scored cleverly.

RED CROSS MATCH AT THE CASTLE

The second match for the Red Cross Society will be played to-morrow at the Castle, Rathfarnham. It will be a distinct novelty, as two of our leading lady players, Mrs. J. E. Fletcher and Mrs. Val Reddin, will oppose Paddy Mahon and Eddie Hackett over eighteen holes. The ladies are former Irish champions and internationalists, and, as they will be in receipt of nine strokes, it should be a most interesting match, played from the men's tee.

Matches have also been arranged at Mullingar, Hermitage, Woodbrook, Carlow, Elm Park, Cork (Little Island), Douglas, Muskerry, Milltown, Grange and Portmarnock, which will bring the series to the end of May. Eddie Hackett would like to hear from other clubs anxious to arrange matches. The entire proceeds will be forwarded to headquarters of the Red Cross Society, and to avoid any misunderstanding it may be mentioned that no arrangement can be made for local branches of the Society to receive a percentage of the takings. The distribution of the funds is a matter for the Society.

No Call-over on Red Cross 'Chase

Owing to various difficulties, principally legal, it will not be possible to hold a call-over on the Red Cross Steeplechase to be run at Leopardstown on March 8th. That news will cause a certain amount of disappointment, for there is no doubt about the great interest created by the two calls-over on the Red Cross Steeplechase of December 28th last.

The desirability of making the call-over a feature of the more important Irish races is being borne in mind. The legal difficulties are not insurmountable, and it is felt that, with a little co-operation from the authorities, they may be overcome very shortly.

A meeting of various interested parties is to be held at an early date, and at the moment there are excellent prospects of a call-over being held in connection with the Irish Lincolnshire, which is to be run at the Curragh April Meeting.

Junior Schools' Cup Matches

HIGH SCHOOL..... 6 KILKENNY COLLEGE 3

Two further matches in the first round of the Schools' Junior Cup were played at Donnybrook yesterday. In the first game High School defeated Kilkenny College by 2 tries to 1. Kilkenny had the better of the play in the opening stages, their forwards doing good work in the loose, and after about ten minutes' play Carroll scored a try. High School, for whom Cole and Lambert were always a prominent did better after this, and Cole, following up a kick, took the Kilkenny full-back off the ball and scored, the kick at goal failing. Nearing half-time Lambert, getting possession at half-way, went right through to score a fine try.

Kilkenny College—R. Roberts; F. Ryan, G. Lett, R. Wallace, H. Carroll; R. Rafter (capt.), G. Rowe; R. Kingston, D. Kelly, G. Rose, P. Morse, J. Kinch. J. Bradshaw, T. Anderson, H. Talbot.

High School—Gardner; McKeown, Grant, Lambert, G. B. Quinn, G. Cole, S. J. Wright; S. Birch, R. Kyle, R. R. Kyle, Callaghan, J. H. Lindsay, Rooney, Clein, J. Fall.

CASTLEKNOCK..... 23 ST. ANDREW'S..... 0

Castleknock College, with a big advantage in size and weight, proved much too good for St. Andrew's College and won by 1 goal and 6 tries to nil. McQuillan and Brennan scored tries in the first half, Browne converting one from near the touch line. The Castleknock forwards took complete command in the second half, and kept play in St. Andrew's territory virtually all the time. O'Hagan, McQuillan (3) and Brennan added further tries.

St. Andrew's College—E. Hamilton; P. Butler, E. Newell, D. Wann, J. de Pauley; R. Williamson (capt.), C. Reid; D. Watts, R. Hill, D. Ingram, J. Redmond, J. Henry, A. Dyas, J. Teegan, R. Wallace.

Local Owner Wins Waterloo Cup

The Waterloo Cup was won yesterday by Swinging Light, who is owned by Mr. C. Molyneux Cohan, a Liverpool ship-owner and broker, and ran in the nomination of Mr. R. C. Brownlee. Swinging Light is the first puppy to win the Cup since Ben Tinto in 1932. He was one of the outsiders on the day of the draw, 40 to 1 being offered against his chance. Mr. Cohan bought him for only 105 gns. The winner is trained by Harold Wright, whose sixth Waterloo Cup winner this was—a record for a trainer. Harold Wright's previous winners were Dee Flint (1940), Dee Rock (1935), Bryn Truthful (1934), Guards' Brigade (1922)

DUBLIN

STOCK MARKETS CLOSE DULL

SMYTH DIVIDEND SURPRISE

GUINNESS FAIL TO HOLD EARLY GAIN

MARKETS closed the week on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday on a quiet note and there was some nervous liquidation in progress, which produced a dull tone. This was particularly noticeable among leading Industrials, as few people wished to open commitments over the week-end in view of the situation on the Continent.

Home Government Funds were well maintained, apart from 4 p.c. Exchequer Bonds, which eased to 106½, but 4½ p.c. Land Bonds tended higher and other issues held steady; 3½ p.c. War Loan closed a shade off at 103¼. Corporation issues were neglected.

Banks showed little life, but the market was buyers for choice and Nationals moved up to 33s. 6d. Munster and Leinsters were buyers up to 93s. without effect.

There was a large business passing in Guinness units. They finished unchanged at 65s. 9d. after touching 66s. 6d. Rails continued quiet, but inclined to give way. Great Northern Ord. slipped back to 4½ and Great Southern Deb. lost 10s. at 53½.

Cement Ord. fell several pence to 28s. and Sunbeam Wolsey Ord. were lowered to 34s. 3d. Dublin Granaries Ord. advanced 2s to 75s., but Irish Sugar Pref. shaded off to 24s. 6d.

Towards the close of business Smyth and Co. announced a dividend of 8 per cent., as compared with 5 per cent. a year ago. This came as a pleasant surprise, but no dealings took place in the shares.

Textiles moved downwards. Coats Ord. and Courtaulds lost pence at 31s. and 29s. 9d. respectively. B.A.T. Ord. were sellers at 90s. and Imperial Tobaccos declined to 95s. 3d. Imperial Chemical Ord. eased to 28s. 8½d., Lever Bros. Ord. to 21s. 9d. and Leyland Motors Ord. to 60s. 9d. Shell Transport Ord. drooped to 41s. 7½d., United Steel Ord. to 21s. 7½d. and Woolworth Ord. to 51s. 3d.

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS

Thomas Dockrell, Sons and Co.—Report for the year 1940 shows that the profit on trading amounted to £5,049, compared with £5,556 in the previous year. The Ordinary dividend is being maintained at 2 per cent. for the year. Provision for extension of premises is halved at £1,000, so that the carry-forward is increased from £2,815 to £3,064. The meeting will be held at Trinity Chambers, Dame street, Dublin, on Tuesday, February 25, 1941, at 11 a.m.

Smyth and Co.—5 per cent. (1/- per share) on Ordinary shares, making 8 per cent. for year (last year 5 per cent.).

Borax Consolidated.—Net profits advanced from £425,644 to £464,148. Dividends are maintained, the Prefd. Ord. receiving a final of 3 per cent., making 6 per cent., and the Defd. a total of 7½ per cent. for the year.

Beans Industries.—Final dividend of 27½ per cent. actual, making 37½ per cent. actual. (Same.)

Coventry Gauge and Tool.—Profit £232,413 (against £185,929). The distribution on the Ord. is repeated at 15 per cent., tax free, half of this amount being paid as a cash bonus.

Cables and Investment Trust.—Interim 2 per cent. (Same.)

Chrysler Corporation has declared a dividend of $1.50 on the Common stock. The Corporation reports 1940 earnings of $37,802,000 (equal to $8.69 per share), compared with $36,880,000 ($8.75) for 1939.

J. and A. Churchill.—Dividend 7½ per cent. (against 10 per cent.).

Potaling Tin.—Final dividend of 25 per cent. and a bonus of 25 per cent., making 125 per cent. for the year (against 45 per cent.). Profit jumped from £144,495 in 1939 to £422,057 last year. Forward £47,629 (against £32,655).

Peter Walker and Robert Gain (Brewers).—Dividend 5½ per cent., making 7½ per cent. (Same.)

Wagon Finance Corporation.—Dividend 1/-, making 2/-, or 10 per cent. (against 17½ per cent.).

LONDON MONEY MARKET

The results of yesterday's weekly Treasury bill tender proved a little more favourable to the market than on the previous Friday, applications submitted at £99 15/- securing 23 per cent. of their requirements, as compared with only 10 per cent. last week earlier. Conditions in the market were not materially changed. A number of clearing banks were good buyers of bills for immediate delivery at the 1 per cent. minimum, and, as market houses were not very willing sellers, there was no surplus of offerings. Other discount rates were maintained at the usual levels.

The silver market was weaker. Spot fell ⅛d. to 23½d., at which point it was at parity with the forward price, which was without change from the previous day.

No material changes were made in the principal Foreign Exchange rates.

OUTSIDE FACTORS AT WORK

UNEXPECTED BLOW FOR INVESTORS

THE London Stock Markets remained under the influence of outside factors yesterday and the uncertainty in the Balkans and the indefinite position in the Far East gave the markets a somewhat clouded aspect. The tone at the opening was dull in most sections, but during the day the cloud lifted in some directions, and at the finish prices, in some cases, were above the lowest of the day. There was no general weakness, and in most cases declines were quite moderate in extent.

DIVIDENDS PASSED

Industrial shares in addition to the general atmosphere of uncertainty, had a rather severe blow by the passing of the Preference dividend of the Gas Light and Coke Company, which came as rather a shock. The stocks affected are Gas Light and Coke Company 3½ per cent. and 4 per cent. Preference Stocks, South Metropolitan Gas Company 6 per cent. and 4 per cent. Preferences and Commercial Gas Company 4 per cent. Redeemable Preference.

Total of these stocks in issue is over £9½ millions, and as £30¼ millions of Ordinary stock also automatically go out of the dividend list, making a total of £39¾ millions, many investors suffer an unexpected blow.

Any benefits from armament work have been swamped by abnormally heavy costs.

Prices of gas have been raised, but costs have also further risen. Values of most Gas issues were adjusted downward.

OLD CONSOLS LOWER

Among Gilt-edged stocks losses did not exceed fractional proportions. Old Consols, Funding Loan and 3 per cent. Conversions all receded to the extent of ¼, while 3½ per cent. War Loan shed ⅜. Other British Government securities were maintained at their previous prices.

In the Foreign Market, Belgian 4 per cent. Bonds were again supported, and finished a point to the good at 69. Japanese stocks were flat, the 5½ per cent. Conversions being four points down at 23, while the 6 per cent. 1924 stock fell 2½. Chinese stocks were generally maintained except for the 5 per cent. Reorganisation Loan 1913, which shed ½. Brazilian descriptions were on the firm side, and Egyptian Unified also hardened.

British Rails were not without support, and Great Westerns came into demand late in the day, so that they were able to finish a point up at 35½, while L.M.S. Ord. were ½ to the good. Southern Pref.-Ord. and Def.-Ord. also appreciated but L.M.S. 4 per cent. Pref. fell a point. Among Colonial and Foreign Rails, South Americans were a trifle easier in places, and Canadian Pacifics shed ½.

LOSSES IN OIL SHARES

Oil shares reflected the general trend, prices being marked down in the absence of support, and losses ranged up to 3s. 1½d. in the case of Burmah, while Shell Transport lost 1s. 10½d., the same loss being shown by Anglo-Iranian Ord. Other losses did not exceed 1s. 3d. Falls to this extent occurred in Anglo-Iranian First and Second Pref. and Lobitos. Mexican Eagles were only the bare turn easier at 7s. 6d. In the Trinidad group, Apex and Leaseholds eased, but Petroleum Developments were maintained at 49s. 6d.

In the Brewery group, Guinness at 66s. 3d. were 9d. easier, while Bass shed a shilling. Watney Defd. failed by sixpence to maintain their price. Stores shares held up quite well, Woolworths being only 4½d. easier at 51s. 9d., while Marks and Spencers at 34s. were 3d. off.

Among Textiles, Coats and Courtaulds fell 3d. and 1½d., respectively.

Electrical shares showed only one or two losses of a few pence, and movements among Iron and Steel shares were confined to a few shares, which were just a trifle easier, Vickers being 1½d. lower at 14s. 9d. Motor and Aircraft issues were little changed, Hawker Siddeley at 12s. being 1½d. easier.

TOBACCO TRUST UP

Among Tobacco shares, "Imps" lost ⅛, with Carreras ⅛ down, but Tobacco Trust Ord. moved up 1s. 3d. to 53s. 9d. Elsewhere, J. Lyons rose 7½d. and Tate and Lyle improved. Imperial Chemicals, Beechams Pills and Lever Bros. Ord. all fell 3d., and Dunlop Rubbers at 33s. were 4½d. down.

In the Mining market, movements were mainly against holders, but, on the other hand, there were signs of support in several directions. Modder East put on ¼, Nourse added ⅛, and Langlaagte Estate hardened 4½d. Sub-Nigels fell ¼, as did Crowns, while there were several losses of smaller fractions. Western Reefs shed 1s. 4½d. to 20s. 9d., and West Springs fell 7½d., as did Van Dyk and Vanterspost. There was little selling from the Cape, and losses generally arose from a little offering on local account.

West Africans showed only a couple of small losses, Ashantis being 3d. off, while Rhodesian Coppers were little changed, Rhoanglos being 3d. down. Among Diamonds, De Beers Defd. shed ⅛, and in the Tin group there were one or two small losses.

RUBBERS LIVELY

There were more movements among Rubber shares than for some time, and they were all in one direction. Rubber Trusts at 5s. 7½d. were 10½d. down, Anglo-Dutch fell a shilling, and United Sua Betong shed 1s. 3d. Other losses were 1s. 3d. in Pataling and Highlands, several others being 7½d. down, with Florin shares often a copper or two lower.
